BRITAIN MAKES NO RESERVATIONS

PEACE PACT ACTION WAITS ON DOMINIONS

Ratification Will be Deposited as Soon as These Decisions Made

Associated Press Cable

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, told the house of commons that the British government proposes to deposit its ratification of the Kellogg-Briand peace pact as soon as the dominion governments are in a position to do likewise.

Sir Austen said specific ratification by parliament was unnecessary, since opinion in both houses from the first has been so strongly in favor of the pact.

Commander Joseph M. Kenworthy Labor member for Hull, asked if Sir Austen were aware that there were certain criticisms levelled at him "about the reservations attached" to the pact.

"There are no British reservations, neither are there United States reservations," the foreign secretary replied

Prairie Lumbermen Suffer Criticism

Canadian Press

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 28.—The need for more co-operation and the necessity for knowing more of each other's problems was stressed this morning by Roy G. Roberts, Winnipeg, president of the Western Canada Retail Lumbermen's association at the opening session of the annual convention here.

In a general review of the lumber business Mr. Roberts stated that all branches were inter-dependent. "We can never solve our problems by working in our own little corner without any reference to the other branches of the industry," he declared.

Mr. Roberts criticized some prairie dealers for their manner of doing business and emphasized the fact that the present organiation had been brought into being in order to better that condition.

The demonstration Atlantic flight, however, will be made under the auspices of the Air Ministry and it has not yet been decided to accept fare paying passengers, though it has been decided in principle that there shall be facilities for the press.

BRITISH SHIP FEARED LOST; TWO MISSING

Snow Storms and Gales Imperil Vessels on North Atlantic

Associated Press

ABOARD COASTGUARD CUTTER TAMPA, Jan. 28.—Indication that the disabled British steamer Silver Maple had been able to make repairs to her steering gear was received today in the first radio received from the vessel by the Tampa.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—Two coastguard cutters were racing to the aid of a ship in distress, 700 miles east of Boston today, and a tug was seeking another disabled craft between Bermuda and the Azores. Meanwhile hope faded for the safety of the steam trawler Seiner, a week overdue at Groton, Conn., from the Georges Banks.

Fighting their way through snow-squalls and a strong west-northwest wind, which sometimes blew a full gale, the cutters Mojave and Tampa were seeking the British freighter Silver Maple in answer to her "S.O.S." sent out Saturday after saying she was helpless with a disabled steering gear.

The Mojave, sixty miles ahead of the Tampa, was expected to reach the position of the distressed ship about one o'clock tomorrow.

Crew of 40

The Silver Maple, a craft of 5,300 tons, carried a crew of 40.

Word received at Lloyds' London office, from Horta, in the Azores, said a tug had been despatched to search for the Italian freighter Capo Vado, which was apparently in distress about mid-way between the Azores and Bermuda.

An S. O. S. was picked up from the Capo Vado last Friday. Since then

High Council Ridicules Idea Of Referendum

By HENRY SOMERVILLE
Special Despatch to The Edmonton Bulletin (copyright)

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Members of the High Council of the Salvation Army ridicule the suggestion which has been put out by friends of the Booth family that the questions now at issue should be submitted to the rank and file of the Army.

A referendum could not be confirmed in Great Britain but would have to be extended to 83 countries. General Booth has written to the High Council offering to withdraw his nomination of a successor if the whole question of reform of the Army constitution, is put to a general vote. Members of the council are generally in an uncompromising frame of mind. They say that General Booth's legal action is a challenge to the very existence of the High Council and this issue must be settled before any friendly conferences take place.

India Government To Fetter Communists

Canadian Press Cable

NEW DELHI, India, Jan. 28.—His Excellency Lord Irwin, viceroy of India, in the speech from the throne at the re-opening of the assembly today, stated that the government has decided to re-introduce proposals to deal with communist agents from abroad, including provision of power to confiscate or control remittances from communist sources outside India.

This forecasts sterner measures to deal with the communist threat in India. A previously drawn up public safety bill, rejected by one vote in the assembly last year, provided for removal from India of foreign Bolshevist agents.

TODAY'S ODDEST NEWS

ABLE-BODIED SEAMAN'S STORY HOLDS NO WATER

PENSACOLA, Fla., Jan. 28.—F. A. Sherman is a seaman, and, of course, should know a lot about water, but he told a tale of liquor in police court that "didn't hold water."

Sherman was arrested last night by Captain Riley Simmons and charged with drunkenness and possessing liquor. In court today, the seaman pleaded not guilty. He told Judge Milton B. Frank he was not drunk, "and as for the liquor I don't know how it happened to be in my pocket."

Judge Frank couldn't believe that a man could be sober and still not know that he had a pint of whiskey in his hip pocket, so he fined Sherman $15 and costs.

Military Court Must Provide Military Prison

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Jan. 28.—A military prisoner, convicted by military authorities, must serve whatever detention sentence is awarded him in a military prison, according to a verdict rendered here Saturday. The court awarded J. D. Sutton, formerly in the Royal Canadian Air Force, $450 damages against Squadron Leader D. M. Hume. Because he was imprisoned for seven days in a civilian prison, Sutton sought damages for "false arrest." He had been sentenced by Squadron Leader Hume.

AFGHAN FORCES RALLY AROUND FORMER RULER

Several Provinces in Favor of Return of King Amanullah

Associated Press

BOMBAY, India, Jan. 28.—An announcement issued by the Afghan consulate today said that former King Amanullah had been recalled to power.

The announcement said:

"The consulate has been officially notified that former King Amanullah at the earnest request of the people of Kandahar, Farah, Hirate, Mazar, Ishariff, Maimena and Kataghan, and having in view the integrity of the nation, has accepted the reins of government and the kingdom again."

Great national activity has started in the centres named and Kandahar is serving as headquarters. The Hazara, Monad, Wardak and other tribes in southern Afghanistan have expressed their continued loyalty to Amanullah.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Mail today prints dispatches from Lahore, India, stating that Sir Denys Bray, foreign secretary of India, has gone to Peshawar because of the possible necessity of evacuating the few foreigners who still remain in Kabul, Afghanistan. The correspondent says that the position of the Afghan capital is chaotic and perilous with the inhabitants openly praying for the return of Amanullah after experiencing the misrule of Habibullah.

There is a growing demand in British India for the withdrawal of Sir Francis Humphreys, the British minister, who is regarded as in graver danger than at any time since the dynastic disorders began.

Clear Decks For Opening Of Federal Parliament

Election Act Revision and Immigration Matters Are Main Business for the Forthcoming Session

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Jan. 28—The past week has been one of preparation in political circles for the opening of parliament which is now only 11 days off. It has been a clearing of the party decks in anticipation of some strenuous actions which the forthcoming term is expected to witness.

All political gossip in Ottawa is at the moment monopolized by the one subject—Beauharnois. The question as to how the cabinet will deal with this gigantic proposal to construct a 14-mile power and navigation channel on the St. Lawrence river to connect Lake St. Francis with Lake St. Louis is being canvassed from every angle. So far no indication of the government's decision has been given. It has been gossiped around that the United States government, in view of its interest in the larger St. Lawrence waterways scheme, had been sounded out on the Beauharnois plan and that it did not view the project with hostility. Apparently announcement of the cabinet's decision must wait for one more week, for there is no meeting of the privy council until February 4.

It is understood that the speech from the throne has been drafted but its contents are, of course, an inviolable secret. The assumption in the capital is that a not unimportant item of government legislation to be forecast in the speech will deal with the reconstruction of the finances of the Canadian National Railways.

Liberals Spell Doom For Labor In Old Country

Announcement by Sir Herbert Samuel That Conservatives Will be Kept in Power, Considered Blow to Radical Aspirations

By HENRY SOMERVILLE
Special Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin (Copyright)

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Sir Herbert Samuel made a definite declaration on Saturday that the Liberal party will not use its parliamentary votes after the next general election to instal a Labor government in office. This is a political announcement of the first importance and it is Samuel's reply to Baldwin's taunt that if the next government is not Conservative it is bound to be Labor, and that a Labor government dependent on Liberal votes might be more mischievous than one which bore undivided responsibility for its policy.

Liberals With Tories

Samuels says that his declaration only repeats what Lloyd George said himself at the Yarmouth Liberal conference, but the Yarmouth statements were open to a variety of interpretations. The new declaration, if it means anything, means that the Liberals will always vote with the Conservatives in the new parliament when the life of the Government is at stake. It means that the Labor party can form a government only if it has a clear majority over both other parties. This result is as wildly improbable as that the Liberals will be second instead of third, numerically.

Phillip Snowdon, who has been given the glad eye to Liberalism now sees that that party has rejected him for the Conservatives, although the latter have disdained to make any advances. Snowdon faces facts with his customary directness. "It means, of course, an alliance between Conservatives and Liberals," was his instant comment on Samuel's statement.

Formber Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald said: "It is well that the situation should be perfectly clear. The Liberals cannot put themselves in office, but in order to win a few seats they have now pledged themselves not to put Labor in."

Await Lloyd George

Lloyd George, the Liberal leader, is on a holiday in Italy, and a statement from his is anxiously awaited. Liberals of the type represented by the Manchester Guardian are astounded and distressed by Samuel's bombshell. They recall that Samuel himself, 16 months ago, said that the sympathies of the rank and file of Liberalism were more with Labor than with Toryism and that they would prefer to enter the Labor party in the hope of making it more moderate to entering the Conservative party in the hope of making it progressive.

Samuel's new move seems designed to win Conservative votes in constituencies where Liberals have a better chance of defeating Labor.

VICTIMS ARE BADLY BURNED IN EXPLOSION

Fifty-five Escape Through Second Entrance to Wrecked Tunnel

Canadian Press

KINGSTON, W.Va., Jan. 28—The removal of 14 burned and mutilated bodies from the Kingston Pocahontas Coal Co. No. 5 mine here, where an explosion occurred Saturday, has accounted for all miners in the workings when the blast spread destruction through the underground workings. Fifty-five workers escaped.

The last of the bodies were brought to the surface nearly 24 hours after the explosion by rescue squads who had toiled since the detonation rocked the district.

Several fires kindled by the explosion, handicapped rescue efforts until extinguished. Surface buildings, including that housing the ventilating system, were put out of commission and this also hindered the safety crews until repairs could be made.

"The number five mine extends two miles through a mountain, with entries on each side. The miners who escaped emerged through the Coal river entrance, on the other side of the mountain from here. They waded through water to their knees to reach the open air and then walked over the mountain of Kingston in water-soaked clothing.

The miners who died were in the sector where the explosion apparently originated while the others were in distant parts of the large mine and were warned of trouble by the rush of air which follows an explosion.

Five hundred men is the normal force of the No. 5, but only 69 were on duty Saturday when the blast ripped through the passageways at about 2 a.m.

MURDER CLUE GIVEN BY DOG

Find Dead Seaman Probably Member of Canadian Raider Crew

Associated Press

HOBOKEN, N. J., Jan. 28.—A large brown dog today provided the only clue to the murder of an unidentified seaman, whose body was found with a .45 calibre bullet lodged in the breast here today. The dog, owned by William Cassidy, a night watchman, dragged a tan leather valise through the street and deposited it proudly at his master's feet. The bag was found to contain a woman's purse in which there was an envelope bearing the name of a woman. The police have not divulged the name of the woman, but she is believed by them to have been used to lure the seaman to his death.

The man was dressed like a seaman. He was about 35 years old, 150 pounds, six feet tall and was a cripple.

Police recognized him in several snapshots found on his person, some of whom showed Eskimos. One picture in particular which attracted the attention of the officers was a picture of a ship moored in the ice. The slain man was shown in the picture, and the name "Canadian Raider" was visible on the bow of the boat.

OPEN FOUR NEW FARM CENTRES FOR TRAINING

Sequel of British and Canadian Agreement on Immigration

Canadian Press Cable

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The British ministry of labor is opening four new training farms in Britain for migrants to Canada. The opening of the new centres is the sequel to the conclusion of an agreement between the British and Canadian governments for the movement to Canada of six thousand farm laborers during the coming spring.

Working under this agreement the British authorities are actively recruiting throughout the country and are opening three new centres near Brandon on the border of Norfolk and Suffolk, which together have a capacity of 800 men at one time, and a fourth training centre in Scotland with a capacity of 120 men.

Longer Courses

Longer training courses, of 12 weeks, will be given, comprising the subjects of clearing land, tree felling, fence building, dairying and handling of horses and general farming.

In addition five shorter courses at "testing centres" are being started. In these, where the course lasts only a month, the idea is rather to test the applicant's fitness for farm work and give him some preliminary training.

The ministry of labor, under whose jurisdiction the training farms come, is following two guiding principles:

(1) The man should be of a type likely to succeed in Canada and, (2) there should be no question of trying to "dump" what are termed "unemployables" into Canada.

Prepare Applicants

Responsible officials state that an endeavor is being made so far as possible on this side to prepare the applicants for the actual work on a Canadian farm.

While recruiting has been actively carried out for some time now, the agreed total of 6,000 has not yet been reached. The idea is to have the whole movement cover the period between March and June.

Entirely apart from the body of 6,000 the Canadian government, in concluding the agreement early this month, intimated it would assist in placing as many as possible of any others who want farm work and wished to go to Canada on the new $80 ocean rate. An important extension as well is being made of the training system in Britain for boy migrants, the Canadian government having announced that the Newcastle training hostel for youths will be duplicated in South Wales, Hull and Glasgow, while new ones have already been established at Liverpool and Bristol.

Available details of the tragedy, vouchsafed by provincial police officers, indicated that the pair were killed when their car skidded on the frozen highway, plunged into the ditch and overturned, catapulting its two occupants through the ice into the water beneath.

Doukhobor Fanatics Are Preparing for Battle With B.C. Provincial Police

WAR DECLARED ON DOUKHOBOR FREEDOM SECT

B.C. Police to Make Arrests —Fanatics Gather For Battle

Canadian Press

NELSON, B.C., Jan. 28.—War has been declared against Doukhobor fanatics in the Grand Forks district by the provincial police of the district Sunday night. Inspector Dunwoody stated that a force of provincial police will be in Grand Forks Wednesday and that the men sought by the police in the Sons of Freedom sect will be arrested forthwith. It was on Friday last that the Doukhobors in frenzied wrath, and minus their clothing in sub-zero weather attacked two provincial policemen who went to arrest three of the Doukhobor members and drove them from the territory. Since then provincial police have been silent. It was not until Sunday night that Inspector Dunwoody made his statement that the police will act. "We will be over there tomorrow," he stated, "and we will not need many reinforcements."

In the meantime from Grand Forks comes the news that the Doukhobors who declared war on government authority and challenged British Columbia's police force to combat, are losing no time in concentrating forces in readiness for the battle which they expect to wage with officers of the crown. Scouts have gone through the Doukhobor colonies and there had been a steady trek of Russians to join the shock troops. The whole rumpus started when police tried to arrest three Doukhobors for driving Doukhobor children from five Doukhobor schools in the vicinity of Nelson.

Rushing to Aid

ON BOARD U. S. COASTGUARD CUTTER TAMPA, via Radio, Jan. 28 —Grave fears for the safety of the disabled steamer Silver Maple were held Sunday night by officers of the coastguard cutters Tampa and Mojave, which were racing through the turbulent waters of the North Atlantic in answer to an S. O. S. call from that vessel.

Snow squalls and strong west-northwest winds, with gusts of whole-gale force, which raised a heavy following sea, were the causes of the apprehension. More threatening weather was forecast.

The Silver Maple has been at the mercy of the seas since Saturday afternoon, when she reported her steering gear as crippled. Her last reported position was 200 miles south of the lanes for trans-Atlantic steamers and 780 miles east of Boston. Officers of the Tampa believed that because of sea currents to the east and the northwesterly winds, she had probably drifted southward and eastward from that position at least 45 to 50 miles.

No radio contact had been made with the Silver Maple by either the Tampa or Mojave at nightfall. The absence of such communication tended to substantiate theories of the coastguard officers that she may be badly crippled.

The new position as given in the message revealed that the Silver Maple had drifted considerably since her position first was reported yesterday. At that time she reported her position as 37.10 north, 56.16 west.

mittee of the House of Commons will be appointed to overhaul it and to bring in recommendations for its betterment.

The dissatisfaction expressed over the decision of the minister of immigration, Hon. Robert Forke, to restrict the number of non-preferred migrants to thirty per cent of last year's total is something that will undoubtedly find an echo in the House of Commons. The opposition contend that since Canada needs new settlers the means that should have been adopted to maintain a balance of British over foreign migrants was for the government to offer still greater inducements to Britons rather than cut down the others.

Give U.S. Monopoly

The government's decision to restrict the British preference on commodities entering Canada to goods containing not less than 50 per cent British labor has been under fire for the past week. It is contended that the application of this provision would have the effect of giving the United States a complete monopoly on cotton goods entering Canada. Sir William Clark, British high commissioner, is believed to have asked that the government issue a subsidiary list to provide for this situation.

S. W. Jacobs. Cartier) has given notice of a bill which would render unnecessary the re-election of a cabinet minister on appointment to office. M. N. Campbell (Progressive, Mackenzie) will move for the appointment of a commission to enquire into the matter of watered stock; Miss Agnes MacPhail (progressive, Southeast Gray) will ask that for every $100 spent on war preparation, one dollar be spent on the establishment of institutions for peace; E. J. Garland (Progressive, Bow River) will seek to have all administrative appointments brought within the operations of the civil service commission.

Production In B.C. Mills To Be Curtailed

Canadian Press

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 28.—Beginning today and continuing until March 1, British Columbia coast lumber mills will curtail production 20 per cent on a basis of time operation

This decision was reached at a meeting of all representative lumbermen held in Vancouver. It was a unanimous decision.

While prospects for a better market later in the year are considered bright, the meeting decided there is nothing in the situation at present which justifies full time production.

U.S. FARMERS ARE WARNED IN GOVT. REPORT

Told Beef Prices Have Reached Peak—Canada Wheat Competitor

By FRANCIS G. ALDHAM
Staff Correspondent of the Canadian Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—A warning that the prices for beef cattle have reached their peak and that fresh meat may be supplanted in the food markets of this country by vegetables and dairy products; prediction that competition from Canadian and other countries will weaken the world market for export grain; a hint that the United States government expects a decline in national prosperity within 12 months, all are contained in the "Agricultural Outlook for 1929," prepared by the staff of bureau of agricultural economics, assisted by representatives of agricultural colleges and extension services.

The report predicts that in spite of continued unemployment there will be no significant decrease in the purchasing power for agricultural products in Great Britain next year.

Reduced Wheat Acreage

Discussing foreign competition the report says, "the tendency toward expansion in wheat production is particularly noticeable in Argentina. It seems probable, however, that the low prices prevailing during the present year may cause some curtailment in wheat acreage for 1929-1930." No immediate effect is anticipated from gradually increasing wheat acreage in Russia, says the report. European production in feed grains will be larger in 1929, the reports says, and flax seed acreage in Argentina continues to expand.

Regarding beef the report says "the high prices in the United States have stimulated imports in beef and cattle during the past two years, but these imports represented a small proportion of our total beef consumption. An upward trend is noticeable in foreign beef cattle production but no serious competition in our domestic market is anticipated in the next few years."

The statement from the department may have some significance in the light of the submissions made to the tariff committee of the house in the last few days by western American cattle raisers demanding an increase of a hundred per cent in the tariff on feeder cattle and two hnudred and fifty per cent in the tariff on fresh beef.

Canada Strong Competition

Japan and some parts of China are taking more wheat, says the report. "Our Pacific coast wheat producers should be in a position to share in any increase in demand, but Canada will continue to offer strong competition for Oriental wheat and flour markets." markets."

Discussing the general outlook the report advises farmers "in making long time plans should consider the possible future downturns in the beef and sheep prices cycles and continued heavy foreign competition in wheat, general stability and growing demands for dairy products and the tendency for demand for fruits and vegetables to increase faster than population."

Further on the report utters another warning. "The present credit situation has raised the question in the minds of many whether, the peak in the present upward trend in business may not come in 1929 rather than in 1930."

Demand May Fall Off

"Farmers should interpret the present business situation as holding in store one of two possibilities, either a continuation of the recent fairly active demand for farm products during the most of 1929, but weaker during the first half of 1930, or else that during the last half of 1929 and the first half of 1930 demand for farm products which are sensitive to business conditions, may not be quite so good as during the 1928-1929 season. On the whole the latter appears to be the more probable of the two possibilities."

Discussing wheat in particular the report says that the decrease in the fall sown wheat in Canada is not important "except as being indicative of a tendency. Reports indicate that good progress was made in the fall plowings for spring wheat in Canada but it is probable that the low prices and low quality of much of this year's Canadian crop will at least check the expansion of the spring wheat area in Canada in 1929 but there are still extensive areas in western Canada which will be planted to wheat."

and Mowat were to have taken over the extra engine and caboose at Red Deer and assemble another train at that point.

At 3:20 o'clock Sunday morning the first train was standing at Airdrie while the locomotive took water. The extra crew were in their caboose, apparently asleep. Though the temperature was 42 degrees below zero, the weather was clear.

The train had been standing at the Airdrie station for several minutes when suddenly the second freight train loomed out of the night and crashed into the rear of the stationary train.

Nothing could be done for Goodman and Beldon. Their battered bodies when picked from the wreckage of the caboose offered clear evidence that death had been instantaneous.

Mowat suffered a broken shoulder blade, a long scalp wound, general bruises and severe shock. It was reported tonight that Mowat's condition was favorable and that he was resting comfortably.

Northern Plane Now On Return Journey

The Western Canada Airways mail plane left Fort Simpson on the return journey to Waterways on Sunday morning at 11.45, but up to an early hour on Monday morning no news of its arrival at Fort Smith, the first stop on the outward flight, had come through.

It is expected that news of the flyers' safe arrival will be radioed out during the afternoon.

May Leave Celtic to Mercy of the Waves

The Atlantic Ocean over which the liner Celtic once reigned as queen of the passenger service now has the vessel at its mercy. The Celtic, shown here fast to the rocks off Queenstown, Ireland, probably will be abandoned by its owners because salvage operations have been found almost impossible. Passengers and crew were taken off in safety after a fierce gale had driven the ship aground.

AGED SETTLERS BURN TO DEATH

Mr. and Mrs. Lamerand Perish in Duck Bay Home

Canadian Press

WINNIPEG, Jan. 28.—At Duck Bay, Man., tiny fishing hamlet on the shore of Lake Winnipegosis, a husband and wife were burned to death in their little home, according to a special despatch from Winnipegosis, Man. The victims of the double trabedy are M. and Mme. Lamerand, aged and esteemed settlers who kept a stopping place at the northern settlement.

Flames from the burning building early Saturday morning roused the startled settlers from their sleep and they rushed to the assistance of the ill-fated couple. Before aid was possible, however, the ravaging flames must have claimed their victims. The would-be rescuers stood aghast as the wind-fanned flames consumed the wooden building.

Found a few feet from the door of his residence, the body of M. Lamerand gave mute evidence of his efforts to escape from the blaze. His wife's charred corpse was discovered in the tangled ruins of the bed.

Inaugurate Air Mail Ottawa To Maritimes

Canadian Press

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 28.—Another link has been welded in Canada's expanding air mail chain with the inauguration of the Ottawa-Maritimes service. Carrying 100 pounds of mail, approximately 12,000 letters, from central and western Canada, the Douglas transport plane, piloted by Dan McLean, Ottawa, arrived at St. John at 1.41 this afternoon, Atlantic standard time.

The plane, which broke a skii on landing, had left Ottawa at 7.05 a.m., and halted at Montreal en route to pick up a load of letters. Among those present at the landing at St. John was Hon. P. J. Veniot, postmaster-general.

A second plane to leave here today for Halifax, bearing the Nova Scotia portion of the plane's cargo, was held to the ground due to bad weather conditions. It will get away tomorrow morning, weather permitting. Squadron leader T. A. Lawrence, of Ottawa, will pilot this machine.

CAMROSE WILL SELL UTILITIES CALGARY POWER

Proposed Price $170,000—Water System Will be Increased

Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin

CAMROSE, Alta., Jan. 28.—Interest in a proposition to sell the municipal utilities and anticipation of an opportunity to fully discuss the terms of a proposed agreement with the Calgary Power Company, Limited, were the reasons for the best attended annual meeting of the ratepayers ever held in the town of Camrose, when the burgesses met on Friday evening in the Camrose Town hall. It was decided to sell the utilities to the Calgary Power Company for $170,000.

After the general business of the meeting had been reviewed, the matter of selling the municipal utilities was presented for consideration. Until recently the town supply of water had been obtained entirely from deep wells. For the past two or three years these wells had been gradually failing in the production of water and it had become necessary to temporarily increase the supply from the storage dam fed by Stoney Creek. In the meantime the council had spent many hours trying to solve the difficulty and endeavoring to find an adequate supply from same source other than wells. Several engineers had been commissioned to investigate the situation and advise as to what might be done. Early in 1928 intimations were made to the council by two different companies that proposals would be submitted for the purchase of the municipal electric system. The electric light and power plant has always been operated at a satisfactory profit to the town and the council felt that there was no particular inducement to sell the utility.

Later it developed that in order to acquire the electric system the companies were willing to negotiate for the purchase of both the electric and waterworks systems. The result has been that the council decided to accept the proposal of the Calgary Power Company, Limited, whose offer for the two utilities was $170,000. The water rates to be charged by the company will remain the same as those which have been in effect for the past several years. The new electric light and power rates will probably lower the aggregate cost of electric energy by thirty per cent to the consumers of the department, based upon the present consumption of electric current, but the actual demand will doubtless be very much increased.

The Board of Public Utility Commissioners has approved of the proposed agreement between the town of Camrose and the Calgary Power Company, Limited, and the necessary bylaw will be submitted to the ratepayers for ratification on February 11 at the same time as the municipal elections take place.

Here is the Problem

In this Word Puzzle, each letter of the alphabet is numbered, and the problem is to find the sum total of all the letters that make up the words Baseball, Hockey, Golf, Swimming, Basketball, Rugby, and also the name of the province and the name of the capital city, that count the most. The names of the cities and provinces you are to choose from are listed in the centre of the puzzle.

The first letter in the alphabet (A) counts as one, B counts two, C counts three, D counts four and so on, etc., etc. For example: Take the word Golf, in adding it up, the G counts 7, the O counts 15, the L counts 12, and the F counts 6. 7 plus 15, plus 12, plus 6—40. Therefore put down 40 for Golf and then add the other names the same way. In other words, count up all the letters under the 6 pictures and then select the name of the capital city that adds up to the highest amount, also the name of the province that totals the most. Place these two names in the spaces provided for same and add your 8 totals together, which will give you your answer to the puzzle. The idea is to get the highest total you can, but bear in mind, you are not to add up more than 8 different names to secure your total.

For your information, we wish to make it clear that it is not necessary for you to pick the city that is the capital of the province simply because you picked that particular province. For instance, should you pick British Columbia, there is no reason why you should pick Victoria, unless it adds the most. In other words, you could select one name in Eastern Canada and one in Western Canada, or both in Eastern or Western Canada, or you could select both names in the same territory if they both added up the highest.

In order that there will be no mistake, we are listing down the complete letters of the alphabet with a number next to each one of them, which represents the amount each letter is to be counted as.

A-1; B-2; C-3; D-4; E-5; F-6; G-7; H-8; I-9; J-10; K-11; L-12; M-13; N-14; O-15; P-16; Q-17; R-18; S-19; T-20; U-21; V-22; W-23; X-24; Y-25; Z-26.

Something New

In the event that a second Puzzle or Tie-Breaker is necessary, it will be sent to the contestants who secure the correct answer, within ten days of the date their solutions to the Word Puzzle are received at the Contest Headquarters.

This new Tie-Breaker will be a problem in addition only, but not the odd and even balanced Chain Puzzle which gives the expert a big advantage. It will, in our opinion, be the easiest high-class Tie-Breaker that has yet been used. The maximum total of the figures when added will be a little over 3,000, whereas in the past the better Tie-Breakers usually totaled several hundred thousand.

We are so confident that you will like this new Tie-Breaker that we would suggest that you send in a small subscription on this Word Puzzle, and if the Tie-Breaker meets with your approval and you feel you have an opportunity to win one of the large cash prizes that you send in the balance of your $15.00 at the same time you send in your Tie-Breaker solution.

For your information, we might mention that all tieing contestants will have exactly Three (3) weeks to solve this Tie-Breaker. Each Tie-Breaker will be dated and when it is returned to us must bear the postmark of the date thereon. This means that regardless of where you live, you will have exactly the same number of days to solve the Tie-Breaker as the contestants living nearest to Contest Headquarters.

We wish to make it clear that the Tie-Breaker we refer to here is for the "Word Puzzle" only. The Figure Puzzle solutions are harder for us to check, therefore should it be necessary to send out a second Puzzle or Tie-Breaker on the Figure Puzzle Contest, it will be sent out soon after the Figure Puzzle Contest closes. We would also suggest that contestants do their best to send in the full $15.00 on the Figure Puzzle as we cannot promise to allow those tieing to send in the balance of their $15.00 after they receive the Tie-Breaker.

Bear in mind, the Word Puzzle and the Figure Puzzle Contest, which we have been advertising from time to time, are two separate and distinct contests. We would like very much to have you try both of these puzzles, however this is not compulsory, you may try either one or both.

MAHARG SAYS MIXING DUE TO SAMPLE MART

Prominent Grain Man Declares Evil Foreseen 20 Years Ago

Canadian Press

MOOSE JAW, Sask., Jan. 28—Sittings of the Saskatchewan grain inquiry commission at this point came to a close late Saturday afternoon with 25 witnesses having given evidence since the inquiry opened on Wednesday last.

Chief witness Saturday was J. A. Maharg, for over 20 years a leader in the agricultural world of the province and for a dozen years head of the old grain growers' association of Saskatchewan.

Mr. Maharg gave to the commission an historical review of what has led up to the practice of mixing grain in the private terminals at the head of the lakes submitting that the creation of the sample market years ago was the direct cause. "Mixing did not come as a result of the Turgeon commission," he said. "The introduction of the sample market system was bound to bring with it the practice of mixing. Some of the leaders in the farmers' movement 20 years ago, myself among them, saw this quite clearly and we fought the sample market day and night. It came, however. It has gone and has left us the heritage of a practice which is seriously threatening the supremacy of Canadian wheat on the markets of the world."

Mr. Maharg strongly urged the commissioners to carry their investigations to the old country in order that they might ascertain at first hand the value of the Canadian certificate final, now being called into question by the importers, and also just what happens to Canadian wheat to cause it to reach the importing countries in a degraded condition.

Considerable evidence was given here of "dirty" grain cars supplied by the railway companies, the charge being made that one of the farmers' organizations has to pay $4 a car in order to make them fit for conveying grain from country points.

The commission will open sessions at Weyburn on Monday and visit Carnduff and Estevan during the week.

B.C. Marketing Law Attacked By Chinese

Canadian Press

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 28.—Leave has been granted by the court of appeal to J. P. Hogg, acting in behalf of Chong Chuck and Wong Kit, Chinese potato growers, to appeal to the privy council against judgment handed down by the court of appeal ruling British Columbia's Marketing act intra vires.

The Chinese are attacking the act, contending that in enacting legislation compelling all growers to subject themselves to the control of the mainland committee of direction, the provincial legislature exceeded its powers.

OLD UNIFORMS AFFECT KAISER

Celebrates 70th Birthday at Doorn With All Pomp

Associated Press Cable

DOORN, Holland, Jan. 28.—Former emperor William's 70th birthday was celebrated in his place of exile Sunday with pomp and circumstance. The ex-kaiser was resplendent himself in a field marshal's uniform as he received the salute of all the men who participated. They were gay spiked helmets, decorations and high shiny boots, and wore on their breasts long strings of medals. The women wore dresses with trains and made low curtseys to the ex-ruler.

The ceremonies began with divine service which was followed by a party in the kaiserin salon where birthday gifts filled a table.

Among thousands of telegrams there were those from the Danish king, the queen of Sweden and most of the former German princes of the federated states. When the party gathered around the festive board Friedrich August the third, former king of Saxony, proposed the kaiser's wealth. The former ruler responded with deep emotion, referring to the effect produced upon him at the sight of the old uniforms.

Second Tragedy On Skating Pond

Associated Press Cable

LEIGH, Lancashire, Jan. 28.—Harry and George Brown, brothers, aged eight and thirteen years, and a married man named Watson were drowned yesterday when they broke through the ice of a pond at Digglesflash, near here. The drowning was the second tragedy within a week on the same pond, as three school boys were drowned there Wednesday.

Watson, who was skating, lost his life in an attempt to rescue the lads. The boys and their sister were sliding on the pond and it was the girl's screams that brought Watson to the scene. The girl, who was 11 years old, made shore safely.

Paris Shivers In Universal Cold Spell

Associated Press Cable

PARIS, Jan. 28.—Five persons have died in Paris and its suburbs because of the extreme cold, while three million others are shivering in the most severe weather experienced in France since the Seine froze over in the "Calamity year" of 1870.

The injured through falling on pavements slippery with ice and frozen snow numbered several hundreds, many of whom are in hospitals for treatment of broken legs and arms.

The seaport of Marseilles is practically inaccessible, its ice-floes, resembling the Straits of Belle Isle in winter, are keeping the mail boat Ragputana from India from docking.

Canada Lapses In Applying Peace Pact

Canadian Press

MONTREAL, Jan. 28 — "Canada stands very low in the list of countries of the world in point of applying the principles laid down in the Versailles peace treaty concerning labor," declared J. S. Woodsworth, M.P. for Winnipeg, in an address Sunday at the Young Men's Christian Association forum.

Mr. Woodsworth charged that the dominion had violated the treaty by its failure to apply several of its terms. He referred to the minimum scale and the eight-hour-day clauses in the treaty.

INFLUENCE OF KING GEORGE ALWAYS FELT

English Monarch Takes Duties Seriously—Works for Welfare of People

By HENRY SOMERVILLE
Special Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin (Copyright)

LONDON, Jan. 28—What is the use of a king? This is the question that is persistently asked the inhabitants of this old country by American friends and visitors. To tell the truth, Britishers have difficulty in answering. They know in their hearts that the chief reason for their having a king is that they have always had one except during the Cromwellian regime, which was not at all a satisfactory experiment. They have beheaded one king and deposed several others, but it has never seriously occurred to them to abolish kingship altogether. The monarchy is an inherited institution, and it has to be judged as a going concern. The question is not whether it is a necessary institution, but whether it does not perform necessary functions as well as a president or any other substitute would. So the Britisher confronted by an argumentative American Republican is apt to put up the British Constitution as a whole against the American Constitution as a whole instead of treating the monarchy in isolation.

Has Family Appeal

It is true that the throne has a sentimental appeal, and very largely a family appeal. The royal family are looked upon by every other family as if they were relations. When Princess Mary or the Duchess of York gave birth to babies every woman in the kingdom has a sisterly thrill. When the news comes that Princess Elizabeth has cut a tooth every mother with a peevish baby feels that the highest in the land have the same domestic tribulations as herself, and she feels more consolingly than before the unity of the human race.

The interest in the royal family is not unfelt by nationals of republics. Americans in particular have a craze for royalty which in a Britisher would be regarded as lunacy. During the present illness of the king American newspapers have carried a page of reports where British papers have only given a column. On the scanty material of the doctors' bulletins and the weekly explanations in the medical press the American newspapermen have worked marvels of imaginitive embroidery which have eloquently testified that if divinity no longer hedges a king, the republican mind discovers unparalleled human interest in the blood royal.

Publicity Appeal

This human appeal gives royalty a publicity value which is exerted in many a good cause and the time spent by the Prince of Wales and the Duke and Duchess of York, to say nothing of Their Majesties themselves, in opening hospital wards and so forth, are ceremonial formalities which lead to very practical results. But all this, though it may be worth many acts of democratic legislatures and activities of elected persons, does not answer the question of what are the personal constitutional functions of the king. The constitutional textbooks do not give much information. It is understood that the king exerts influence, but we are not told how. Mr. Tim Healy, who after a long career as a political party leader, came to be governor-general of the Irish Free State, and had himself to exercise some of the constitutional functions of a king, has remarked that it does cabinet ministers no harm to get the views of an impartial and experienced man who position ensures that even cabinet ministers must hear him with respect, indicated one important way in which a monarch may make himself useful.

King Works Quietly

The important part of the king's constitutional influence is exerted in privacy and it is generally a long time after the event that the public knows what the king has done. Looking back on the reign of the present king, George V, we can now see a number of instances where much depended on the king's decision, and it turns out that the king's decision was the right one. There was the very dangerous situation regarding Ireland in 1912-14, when Great Britain was actually on the brink of civil war. Lord Roberts, the idol of the British army, had signed a public declaration warning the Liberal government that the placing of the Home Rule bill on the statute book would justify opponents in taking any action to prevent its operation, and more particularly to prevent "the armed forces of the crown being used to deprive the people of Ulster of their rights as citizens of the United Kingdom." The greatest soldiers on the active list, including General French who was so soon after to be appointed commander-in-chief of the British army in France, resigned their posts because they feared they would be ordered to "coerce Ulster." Men like Bonar Law were urging the king to exercise his veto on the Home Rule bill. A false step by the king at this crisis might have precipitated civil war or cost him his crown. The king firmly kept to constitutional ground and rejected the dangerous advice to exercise the veto. While following no advice except that of his ministers he used all his powers to bring about a settlement, and if he did not win success by the Buckingham palace conference his appointment of the speaker of the house of commons as president of that conference was acknowledged as a master-stroke and made the conference bring at least a respite for the forces of reconciliation.

Cuses Own Judgment

In 1923 it was the king that decided in favor of Mr. Baldwin against Lord Curzon for the prime ministership rendered vacant by the death of Mr. Bonar Law. The majority of the Conservative party were inclined to Curzon, but the king, with more clearness of vision, saw that in these days the prime minister must be a member of the house of commons.

The king again did the right thing when he might easily have gone wrong when the Labor government was defeated. The king could have invited either Mr. Baldwin or Mr. Asquith to form a government, and indeed Mr. Asquith had expected the invitation. But His Majesty, being advised by Mr. Ramsay Macdonald to grant a dissolution, took the wise course of following the prime minister's advice. He was not, in the circumstances, strictly bound to grant a dissolution, but to have gone against the first Labor prime minister would have raised suspicions of partiality that would have made it very difficult for those Labor leaders who wished to keep their party in a constitutional course. The result is that the Labor movement in Britain is whole-heartedly in favor of the monarchy. The king is in some ways a captain, and in other ways an umpire, and he gets the party game to be played according to the spirit and not merely the letter of the rules. But spirit is an elusive thing, and it may be that the most valuable services of the monarch to good government are too subtle for answer to the republican inquiry: "What is the good of a king?"

Toronto Police Discover Crime Club For Boys

Canadian Press

TORONTO, Jan. 28.—A youthful "crime club" and a clubhouse full of stolen articles was revealed to the Toronto police following the arrest of a lad of 11 years here Saturday.

The boy was apprehended as he attempted to steal some cakes from a baker's cart. He explained to a policeman that he wished to become a member of a "club," and that the qualifications were that he must display his ability to steal.

The policeman acted promptly, discovered the clubhouse in rear of a residence, and arrested ten boys, ranging in age from 11 to 14. A large quantity of "loot" varying from milk tickets to a 35 pound pail of candy, was recovered.

CHAMBERLAIN ADMITS NAVAL PARITY TO U.S.

Only Difference With Republic Will be Settled Amicably

Associated Press Cable

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., Jan. 28.—Sir Austen Chamberlain, secretary of the British foreign office, in a speech here Saturday night expressed the conviction that the problem of naval armaments, which is the "only difference" with the United States, could be settled amicably. "Do not be discouraged if we have not solved the problem at once," he counselled.

"As we seek to be loyal to other friends," he said, "so will we seek to be loyal to the nation which is nearest and most akin to racial and moral outlook, of all the nations of the world."

"The existing difference," he said, is "as to how we shall apply a limitation of naval armaments fairly and justly to our different circumstances and conditions. We admit freely and willingly the parity between the United States forces and our own. It is an admission which we have never made to any other nation, and which we would have made to no other nation.

"Such differences as have occurred have not therefore been differences of principle, but merely differences arising out of the difficulties of applying that principle to very different circumstances and needs of the two countries.

"The problem is to find some conclusion whereby we can measure naval strength so that the parity which both nations desire may be reached, and reached at a level which will mean not an increase in the armaments of the world but a reduction."

United States Ambassador Alanson B. Houghton said that there had been too much already said about the relations of the two nations. This had created a sensitive state, but nevertheless the relations remained fundamentally unimpaired.

Hard To Apply

PARIS, Jan. 28.—Parity of naval forces between Great Britain and the United States as an absolute formula is very hard to apply, according to Le Temps, leading Paris newspaper. "Equality for all classes of ships as the Americans understand it would create in reality a state of inferiority for England," Le Temps says, "because the latter is faced with her necessity to defend an immense empire washed by every sea in the world. Any such formula therefore ought to provide special means to guarantee effectively her security. This, in reality, is why a technical solution of the problem of limitation and reduction of armaments is as yet not near being found.

"It is no less true that it is necessary for both Great Britain and the United States to round off the rough spots of their policies and conciliate their conflicting interests so as to cause a rebirth of reciprocal confidence between these two great peoples who both aspire to dominion of the seas.

"The speech delivered by Sir Austen Chamberlain, secretary of state for foreign affairs, in the British government, yesterday, shows that at London they are sincerely applying themselves to the problems. The fact more important to stress, however, is that the British government is not ignoring the fact that Labor and the Liberal opposition have often, rightly or wrongly, charged Sir Austen Chamberlain with having deliberately sacrificed the friendship of the United States. It remains to be seen how Washington will respond to the warm words of the British minister of foreign affairs."

Britain Far From Down and Out

Canadian Press

HAMILTON, Ont., Jan. 28.—Sir William Clark, British trade commissioner to Canada, speaking here before the Canadian club Saturday stated that Great Britain faces the future with courage and is not "down and out."

A return of prosperity is promised in the re-organization of industry and the better understanding between capital and labor, the speaker said. Conditions in the old land, he claimed, were better than the average Canadian pictured them.

WESTERN INDUSTRIAL GROWTH

Canadian National officials claim that more than $27,000,000 were invested last year in industrial undertakings of one kind and another along the lines of that system in western Canada. Investment in similar enterprises in territory served by the C.P.R. doubtless ran to as large an amount, perhaps larger.

On that basis a sum of fifty million dollars or more went into the creation or extension of western industries during the year; a sum equivalent to one-sixth or one-fifth the value of the wheat crop. The west is fast ceasing to be an exclusively farming country. The industrial complement to our agricultural development has been slow in arriving and is still disproportionately small. But it is growing at a rate which in the course of ten years should establish a balance, and discount the tradition that western people "mine" wheat and export it to exchange for manufactured goods made elsewhere.

CURBING CHICAGO

The supreme court of the United States has decided that Chicago has no right to drain Lake Michigan into the Mississippi river because that happens to be a cheap way of getting rid of the city sewerage. Also that, cheap or dear, that particular method of disposing of the sewerage will have to stop. Further, that the diversion of water was permitted as an emergency measure only, and on the supposition that it was the bona-fide intention of Chicago to instal a disposal plant, which has not been done.

That seems to make a pretty clean sweep of Chicago's claim that it could use the Mississippi as a sewer and divert water from Lake Michigan without regard to the shipping interests of other lake ports. Canada has a practical interest in the matter, because it has been claimed that the diversion was lowering the levels of the lower lakes and interfering with the Ontario harbors on Lake Huron, Lake Erie and Lake Ontario. The judgment apparently puts an end to a situation that has been the subject of a prolonged international controversy.

HOW ABOUT A SELLING PLAN?

Since the penitentiary grounds are offered for sale, it is to be assumed that the Government does not want the property, and is only interested in getting out of it the $200,000 named as an approximate price. That is more than the city is at all likely to pay. But it is also more than any other party is at all likely to pay. If the city is without the property, the Government is without the $200,000, and without any present prospect of getting it.

About the only way the Government could hope to get any such figure for the property would be to sell it off in lots to private purchasers, and wait until the purchasers came along. That would involve setting up a selling agency, and maintaining it for an indefinite time. With a probability that when the property had finally been worked off the net returns to the Government would be very decidedly less than the lump sum now demanded.

But the city has a land department, already doing business, and certain to be maintained for years to come. It might be possible to work out an arrangement by which the city would undertake to sell off the property for the Government, taking as its compensation for the service whatever land is required for a recreation park at a set price. The Government could very well afford on those conditions to cut the price for the land the city really wants, and the city could give the services of its land department at little or no cost to itself.

WIPING OUT THE FORESTS

"Though there is sufficient timber in Canada to maintain the present cut for many years, if all of it were exploitable, there is every reason to believe that the forest capital is being rapidly depleted, and if the increased demand is to be met, or even the present output maintained, and the forests of Canada placed on a sound basis of management, provision should be made without delay for the securing of sufficient net increment to meet future requirements. The long time required for the growth of a merchantable stand of timber demands adoption of a forest policy far in advance of the immediate necessities."

The quotation is from "The Forests of Canada", a recent publication issued by the Department of the interior. It has an ominous sound, the more ominous when read in the light of the present situation with regard to newsprint. The manufacture of newsprint in Canada has been so overdone that manufacturers are now confronted with the choice of closing down their mills or of starting a price war. That is to say, we are glutting the newsprint market, at the cost of our forest reserves, and are in such a hurry to get rid of these that more money has been invested in the business than can earn dividends.

Of all our natural resources, in the use of some of which we have brought mismanagement almost to a fine art, there is none that we have squandered with the fine abandon with which we are wiping our forests off the face of the earth. The quotation above, and the publication from which it is taken, show that the national Government is aware of the grand orgy of destruction and forsees the timber-poverty that will fall upon the Dominion in the life time of a generation or less. When will parliament and the legislatures muster enough sense and sand to do something about it?

Wealth

By EDGAR A. GUEST

I'm a rich man and I boast it!
Rich in friendship tried and true,
And a king's lot would be happier if such friends as mine he knew.
I'm a rich man and I know it; rich in laughter and in mirth,
And I wouldn't trade that treasure for the greatest bank on earth.
I'm a rich man and I shout it! Who in all this world can see More of sky and hill and valley than the Lord permits to me?

When the summer birds are pouring out their music to the sky,
Can the man whose purse is fatter hear more melody than I?
Can a hundred million dollars buy more perfume from a rose,
Or get more of rain and sunshine than my little garden knows?
Let who will count wealth in figures, pages wide and columns long,
I'll count mine in lasting friendships and in hours of mirth and song.

Winter Buds

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The difference between great men and others is largely a difference in the possession of "winter buds."

When the leaves fall off in autumn, trees put forth what are called "winter buds."

They remain unchanged through the snow and cold of winter, but when the warm days of spring arrive they burst into the leaves of a new foliage.

With the coming of right conditions their possibilities of growth become evident.

So the possibilities and abilities of great men often lie dormant and unusupected until favorable conditions arrive. They then burst forth.

People who rode up and down on an elevator in Dayton did not preceive the winter buds of ability in the negro boy who did the starting and stopping. Later when Paul Lawrence Dunbar received wide recognition as a poet they were surprised.

La Fontaine in one of his fables tells of a cook who mistook a swan for a goose.

The swan begged for its life, declaring it was not a goose at all. But the cook refused to believe it. Just as he was about to strike off its head it burst into song and he saw his mistake and let it go.

When the time arrives ability appears and the "winter buds" of power which have lain dormant burst into leaves.

So don't be alarmed, mother, if your child shows on indications of superior talent. What if he can't play the violin or the piano, or speak seven languages or do other feats of that sort.

You will find in the end that the man who goes farthest is the best balanced character. Most of those youths with precocious talents go wrong in some way or other.

Plug away trying to make your children morally sane and sound intellectually, and if there is any extraordinary talent in them time and occasion will bring it out.

Do You Remember?

FORTY YEARS AGO

From the Edmonton Bulletin, Sat., Jan. 26th, 1889.

Regina: Sheriff Jeffries arrived unexpectedly on the 18th from Helena and claimed the prisoner Kee-se-ka-wa-sis. He paid about $800 as reward and expenses, and left on the 19th for Helena via Winnipeg. He says the opinion in Helena is that Godin will not hang but will be given a life sentence if the courts grant a new trial.

Regina: The banking firms of Lafferty and Smith is to be dissolved, and the banks operated by them in Calgary, Regina, Edmonton and Moosomin will be continued by a firm to be known as Lejune, Smith & Company.

Calgary: James Lloyd of London, England, and C. S. Drummond of Winnipeg have arrived here and will go to Edmonton to examine the country with a view to ascertaining the advisability of constructing the Alberta and Athbasca railway.

Besides headquarters, and the detachment at Edmonton, outposts are maintained at Chipewyan, Athabasca Landing, Lesser Slave Lake, Peace River Crossing, Beaver Lake, South Edmonton, Wetaskiwin, Lacombe, Red Deer and Innisfail.

The dog trains owned by the Mounted Police at Fort Saskatchewan are being sent to the Yukon early next week. Now that travelling to Peace River can be done with horses and sleighs the necessity of keeping dog trains here has passed.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY

Diet Specialist and Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions on Health and Diet Answered by Dr. McCoy, when addressed in care of The Edmonton Bulletin

SURGICAL EXPLORATION

Surgical technique has improved a great deal during the past few years. During the years of the war both young and experienced surgeons gained a great deal of valuable knowledge because of the stern necessity of operating as efficiently as possible with speed, and were encouraged to take chances when their wounded patients were hovering between life and death. Much good came from this, especially in a better understanding of bone surgery and in the revised technique for handling those wounded by shot and shell. Along with the war surgery, there has also been an improvement in the use of anesthetics and in major surgery to correct organic and functional defects.

Frank McCoy

The clever surgeon can today take out a stone filled gall bladder with a lessened percentage of fatalities. There is however, a limit to the amount of surgery necessary, and a growing distrust in the minds of the sick and afflicted who have held high hopes for a cure through an operation and yet have been disappointed. The constant criticism which I hear from patients is that they think surgeons are only interested in the money they can make from a case. While there is doubtlessly as large a percentage of dishonest physicians as there is among any other profession, it seems to me that the fault lies in the surgeon being too optimistic about the results he expects to achieve with his operation.

Causes of disease are seldom removed by surgery, but usually only the results which have come from improper living. It may be necessary to remove a gall bladder so filled with stones that it resembles a bag of marbles, but many infected and "sick" gall bladders have been removed where correct eating and hygienic habits would have brought about a satisfactory cure. It is all too painfully true that an operation frequently stirs up more trouble.

The "exploratory" operation is often used to try to find the cause of the patient's illness. Searching for causes of disease with a knife is often as dangerous as looking for a gas leak with a lighted match.

It is indeed a rare case that cannot be diagnosed by our modern laboratory methods without resorting to exploratory surgery.

This article is in no sense a criticism of the conscientious surgeon, but a plea that the layman will practice the most healthful rules for living, have a periodic diagnosis made whether suffering from symptoms or not, and be able to keep away from the necessity for an operation as long as possible.

You will find it interesting and profitable to learn all you can on the subject of scientific dietetics, the value of exercise, and the real good which comes from constructive mental therapeutics. If you continue to study and practice what you have learned, you can thank yourself for the results—your busy doctor will thank you for giving him less work to do—and you may later on thank me for calling your attention to better ways of healthful living.

Questions and Answers

Kidney Disease

Question—W. E. S. asks: "Is there any disease of the kidneys that causes them to rot away? If so, is there any possible cure?"

Answer—If the kidneys are forced to overwork in throwing out poisonous substances, they will sooner or later break down and degenerate as they do in such diseases as nephritis and pyeletic. Have a diognosis made in your own case, and then find out how to stop injuring your kidneys.

Lump on Neck

Question—A. M. writes: Several years ago fell on my head and evidently dislocated something at the back of my neck. The cartilage has thickened there, causing a bump. Would friction wear this away? I have been to an osteopath with very little success. It is not painful, merely unattractive. I would appreciate your advice."

Answer—The protrusion you have felt at the base of your neck is no doubt due to the natural extension of the spinous processes of the seventh cervical vertebra. I find that many patients have noticed this on themselves and think it is something unnatural. It seems more prominent in some people whose necks are not well rounded, whether they are too bony or have a padding of fat over this part of their spine.

Question—L. O. asks: "Is there any cure for a nervous breakdown? If so, what is the best known remedy?"

Answer—The first thing to do is to find the cause of what you call a nervous breakdown. As soon as this cause is removed your breakdown will be broken up and you will not know where it has disappeared.

So much to do,
So little done, such things to be.
—Tennyson.

Astrology

By BELLE BART

Planetary Influences on This Day for ALL.

For Those Whose Birthday Is Today

If you were born on January 28, you have a vital, vigorous and martial disposition and the ability to attain any goal by the correct use of mental attitude. There is a tendency toward aggressiveness, which must be overcome through understanding and, unless you are careful, it may disrupt many advantageous ties. It is necessary that you do not arouse antagonism, and you must be circumspect in your personal attitude. Your best efforts would be expended in literature, invention, the military, diplomatic circles, oratory, reform work, engineering and any electrical interests. The most favorable periods for attempting anything reasonable in nature where beneficial result is required are the winter of 1929, the spring of 1930 and the winter of 1931.

Mary Boland, Born January 28, 1880

An example of a person born on January 28 is Mary Boland, prominent stage star, whose horoscope indicates an artistic, temperamental nature, with a profound, scientific mind and a fine personal magnetism.

Others born on this day are Pierre Lorillard, eminent capitalist, and Alexander Doyle, noted American sculptor.

Planetary Conditions for Tomorrow, January 29

Propitious for literary work and unfavorable for business affairs.

Sunshine Shafts

"How would you address the Secretary of the Navy?"

"Your warship, I suppose."

For some reason the mother was absent from the dinner table one evening. The children took their accustomed places with the exception of the youngest, Dorothy, aged seven, who seated herself in the mother's chair. With proper poise she announced, "I am the mother now and you kids must behave." The other children entered into the spirit of the assumed situation, until the boy of ten said, "Well, Dorothy, if you are the mother, how much is six times nine?"

Without a moment's hesitation and still retaining her maternal role, she replied: "I'm busy; you ask your father."

Although Miss Lillian Gish had been acting for the screen for some years prior to appearing in her outstanding success, Way Down East, she was, she confesses, frankly horrified when some of the incidents in its were outlined to her previous to rehearsals—more especially the one where she had to jump on to a drifting ice-floe.

"Oh, that's nothing!" quoth Mr. Griffith reassuringly. "I once saw a play in Italy where the hero caught up the heroine in his arms, banged her head on the ground, and afterwards beat her with a stout cudgel until she was insensible. And this treatment was repeated several times in the course of the piece."

"Good gracious," exclaimed Miss Gish. "What was the name of the play?"

"Punch and Judy," said Mr. Griffith.

BUILDING TO THE BAY

Up-to-date information on the progress made in the development of Canada's Hudson Bay Route is contained in a report recently prepared by the Natural Resources Intelligence Service Department of Railways and Canals. The objective set on the extension of the Hudson Bay Railway during 1928 was Mile 460, thus bringing the steel within 50 miles of Churchill. Actually the steel reached Mile 463 thus accomplishing all that was expected and leaving only 48 miles to be constructed during 1929 to reach the tidewater terminus.

The past summer was a very busy one at Churchill in the construction of temporary docks and the commencement of permanent construction. During the navigation season some 16,000 tons of material sent in by sea from Halifax and Sydney were unloaded at the new port and the dipper dredges, "Churchill No. 1" and "Churchill No. 2", built at Montreal especially for the work, appeared on the scene as well as the hopper barge "Chesterfield". A second hopper barge was also towed from Port Nelson to Churchill and added to the equipment. The arrival of the dredges clears the way for an early start on extensive development this year and large supplies of materials are now on hand for prosecuting the work.

The report on "Progress and Development of Canada's Hudson Bay Route" reviews the history of the development of the Hudson Bay transportation scheme and includes a consideration of its economic aspects and of the mileages involved in the new rail and water route from various centres in Western Canada to Liverpool. The report is available on application to the Director, Natural Resources Intelligence Service, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

Keeping Mentally Fit

By Joseph Jastrow, A.B., A.M., Ph.D., LL.D.

Professor of Psychology, University of Wisconsin, 1888 to 1917; now professor emeritus; lecturer in the New School for Social Research, New York City; past president of the American Phychological Association.

THE SUPERIORITY COMPLEX

We hear a lot about the inferiority complex, because those who suffer from it want to get rid of it and would be—as they agree—more fit mentally if they could. They are handicapped in making their way because for every step forward of self-assertion they are held back by two of self-distrust. They can't meet people on an equal footing. There may be some real inferiorities in their circumstances; there are more unnecessary ones in their feelings and attitudes. That is the complex.

The superiority attitude may not be as common, but is common enough and those who have it, far from regarding it as something to be corrected or cured, are apt to cherish it. It isn't so much that they are too assertive, but rather that their estimate of their personalities lacks proportion. The superiority may be based on birth; and when society is based on that kind of distinction, it is inevitable that some feel superior and others inferior. It may be based on rank, office, station, wealth, authority, age, anything that makes for social differences among men. Perhaps in a country like ours where wealth commands power, the man of means is tempted to become dictatorial and inconsiderate and develop one order of superiority complex, making everybody not in his class feel like 30 cents. As the psychologist sees it, the sense of superiority and the pride that supports it, is far more a matter of personality than of circumstance. The superiority complex (S.C.) develops (so some hold) as a compensation or disguise for a deeper sense of not being quite as adequate as one would wish. It's akin to a pose, an assumption, a "high-hat" manner, trying to pass off as a little better, more important, more knowing, more influential, more recognized than you really are.

A shrewd observer gave me a test of one kind of Superiority Complex. Anybody who says in reply to everything you tell him: "Yes! I know!" is to him under suspicion. Such a person doesn't want to admit inferiority in knowledge, especially of what is news or fashion or in the know. It may be a relatively innocent variety of S.C. but an annoying one. It implies, as S.C. always does, some measure of looking down on others—a head-table kind of attitude toward life. I know a man, otherwise estimable and amiable, who won't attend any banquet unless he has a seat at the head table. He thinks it beneath his dignity as a bank official to sit anywhere else.

Be it noted that there are all sorts of proper prides in the world and society provides forms of distinction in titles and honors and clubs and reputations and rewards that help to maintain self-esteem and give a sense of sufficient success to keep us going; there isn't much danger of S.C. there unless you incline that way. To rate these things beyond their worth; to look down and aloof and dwell upon what uncommon clay you are, and get some satisfaction in showing others their place below yours—all this may go beyond snobbery (where it often stops) and becomes a self-infatuation, an S.C. We all like to associate with our kind on an equal footing and may legitimately choose our associates. Democracy isn't a scramble or an ignoring of actual distinctions; as an ideal it should prevent S.C.

Robert Quillen Says—

A fox whose foot is caught in a noose may do any one of several things. He may leap to and fro in a frenzy of baffled rage and fear, thus multiplying the agony he suffers; he may gnaw through his own flesh and bone and thus win liberty at the cost of a foot; or he may resign himself to the situation and lie still, suffering no pain and enjoying the fruits of philosophy.

A similar choice is offered mortals caught in the trap of circumstance or environment.

Consider, for example, the young Benedict who now repents of his bargain.

He has discovered that matrimony imposes certain obligations and restrictions. He no longer is free to go and come without explanation. He no longer is privileged to be wholly selfish.

The situation offends his masculine pride and he faces a crisis.

Many volumes might be written to advise him, but in the end he must do as the fox did. He will sacrifice much to gain his freedom; he will rebel and fret and lather himself in unmanly resentment; or he will resign himself to the inevitable and live in peace ever afterward.

And here is the pearl in the oyster: the more he struggles, the more he will suffer; and when he decides to struggle no more, his suffering will end.

Nearly all people unhappy because of human relationship are miserable because of restrictions.

The restrictions may be imposed by superior authority, by fear, by a sense of duty and chivalry, or by hard circumstance.

But whatever it is that imposes the restriction, the victim multiplies his misery by resenting it and fighting against it. Even the voluntary martyr of the family increases his unhappiness by resenting his martyrdom.

Fighting against the inevitable is chief of human follies.

The weak and stupid, powerless to change the scheme of things, make themselves miserable by nursing a rebellious spirit. They revel in self-pity. They sulk.

Their misery is a deliberate choice. They can choose happiness if they will. All they need do is resign themselves to things as they are, and at once their woe is ended.

It isn't the possession of "inhibitions" that causes unhappiness, whatever the disciples of Freud may say. It is resentment of the inhibitions.

A collar doesn't chafe the neck. The neck chafes itself by rubbing itself against the collar.

On This Date—

JANUARY 28TH

Sir H. M. Stanley, born January 28, 1841. The life story of Stanley is more suited to the realms of fiction than ordinary existence, much more in keeping with poor boy in the fairy story who marries the King's daughter. Stanley, of course, was not his correct name, but one he assumed after his adopted father, a citizen of New Orleans, U.S.A. Stanley was born in Wales. His name was Rowlands. He was so poor that the poor house was responsible for him from the age of three to thirteen, when he went to New Orleans as a cabin boy, and met the man whose name he was destined to carry to fame. He served in the Confederate Army. Then he entered journalism. James Gordon Bennett, of the New York Herald, toook Stanley under his wing and in 1869 Bennett summoned him to Paris for a new commission. Journalists get some strange jobs at times, but Stanley was not quite prepared for the one in front of him. At that time Dr. Livingstone was lost somewhere in Africa. His commission was to go and find him. Stanley had never met Livingstone, and Africa was rather a Dark Continent at the time, so the task might truthfully be described as a "tall one" and worthy of an American newspaper proprietor. However, Stanley did find Livingstone, as we all know; brought him back to health, and surveyed Lake Tanganyika with him in search of the Nile source. During the rest of Stanley's career Africa loomed large. He possessed a positive genius for handling native races. As Governor of the Congo he accomplished work of enormous difficulty with great success. In 1899 he received a knighthood. Five years later he died leaving a story as romantic as any conceived in fiction.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE PANTAGES

It took Josef von Sternberg, himself, to make a picture to surpass his world-famous masterpieces, "Underworld," "The Last Command," "The Drag Net," and "Docks of New York." His great triumph "The Case of Lena Smith" is opening a three days' engagement at Pantages theatre today.

None of the former pictures by this great director have had the variety, lavishness, the great emotional power of this story of a Hungarian girl's fight for her child. It has the universal appeal of motherhood portrayed with all the reality for which the director is famous.

In the superb emotional role of Lena Smith, Esther Ralston has truly the finest characterization of her career on the screen. It has depth and power. Starting with a prologue in 1913, the scene goes back to the girlhood of a mother who watches her son march away. It pictures her love affairs, her strivings, her sufferings and sacrifices for her son and the picture ends where it began.

An excellent cast supports Miss Ralston, chief of whom is James Hall.

A good comedy and Novelty reel is also on the programme with special music by Al Preston and his famous orchestra.

AT THE RIALTO

The special feature attraction "Submarine" with Jack Holt, Dorothy Revier and Ralph Graves is now showing at the Rialto Theatre for this week only.

The action revolves around the friendship of two petty officers in the navy, who are ready to sacrifice their lives for each other. One marries and the other unknowingly flirts with his buddy's wife. When the husband finds it out there is trouble. The husband is the best diver in the navy and when his pal's submarine is rammed and sinks, the diver has to go down and save the friend whom he believes betrayed him.

Manager Long says: "This is one of the best pictures we have ever shown on our screen and I urge the Edmonton public not to miss it."

There is also a two reel comedy "Husbands Must Play" and other short subjects on the same bill.

Cecil Lord and his Gang of Merrymakers are appearing on the stage every evening at 8:30 in conjunction with Totten and Rullens in a song and dance act.

AT THE EMPRESS

The romance of a gypsy dancing girl and the heir to the throne of her country, provides the motivation for "Dream of Love," which opens today at the Empress Theatre as a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature in which Joan Crawford and Nils Asther are featured. Tonight is gift night at the Empress.

In the colorful drama of the Balkans, Miss Crawford is seen as the wandering minstrel who rises to stage stardom so she might meet the royal pretender on a somewhat equal social footing. Asther, as the Crown Prince finds his ascension to the throne prevents his marrying the girl.

AT THE DREAMLAND

Scenes dazzling in their beauty; lightly-clad dancing maidens; Ethiopians stalwart and glistening; incense urns steaming in the sunlight; enormous classic pillars rising into the sky, gods and goddesses at play; all these and many more spectacular and impressive sights are found in First National's great special comedy "Vamping Venus," featuring Charlie Murray and Louise Fazenda which comes to the Dreamland Theatre today.

Impressive sets were made and hundreds of extras used for the ancient Greece sequences in this picture, a story of a New York politician today who takes an imaginary trip to ancient Athens in the height of its glory.

AT THE MONARCH

A fast battle between two former welterweights of the squared circle furnishes one of the high points in a motion picture now playing locally. The fray is deserving of special mention because of its authenticity from a standpoint of boxing technic.

The fighters are Sailor Vincent, retired undefeated welterweight champion of the United States Navy, Pacific division, and Charles Sullivan, long a main eventer in the upper strata of the boxing fraternity. Vincent and Sullivan, in "The Fleet's In!", the Clara Bow starring picture now playing at the Monarch theatre, precipitate a knock-down-and-drag-out fight in a public part of the waterfront town in which the action of the story is laid.

AT THE PRINCESS

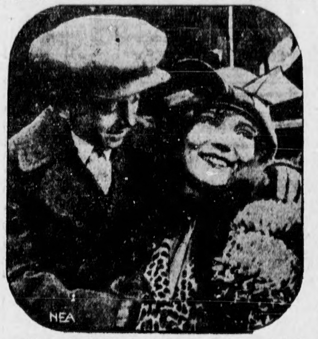
Realistic fight scenes in "Manhattan Cocktail," a Paramount production, were not difficult to obtain.

Richard Arlen, Paul Lukas and Danny O'Shea, the three principal male players in the story, are all good boxers, Arlen and O'Shea excelling in the art.

Arlen and George O'Brien lived at the Hollywood Athletic club for two years and an hour of practically every day found them in the gymnasium whaling away at each other with five ounce gloves. O'Brien is regarded as one of the best boxer-actors on the screen.

The fistic encounters in "Manhattan Cocktail," at the Princess theatre are short but full of action.

Gilda Gray In a Mother Role



Gilda Grey, famed exponent of the shimmy, and of recent note in the divorce courts, is shown here in another role—a mother greeting her son. The picture was taken in Milwaukee where Gilda, whose maiden name was Mary Michalsky, met her son by her first marriage, Milton Gorecki, 14. Gilda recently sued for divorce from Gil Boag, former manager, and Boag filed a reply charging her with misconduct with her present manager, C. D. Krepps, with whom she recently returned from Europe.

FORT McMURRAY, Jan. 28.—The Waterways ladies won a hard-fought and keenly contested game of broom ball from the Fort McMurray ladies at the rink on Sunday afternoon. Mr. S. Record Entry Of 38 Rinks For Women's 'Spiel Tuesday

Overflow From Royal Will Play Opening Games at Edmonton—Banquet and Bridge Part of Week's Program

With a record entry of 38 rinks, the Northern Alberta Ladies' Curling Bonspiel will open in the Royal Victoria and Edmonton Curling rinks on Tuesday morning at nine o'clock. Although the severe weather has deterred a number of out-of-town rinks from attending, there are 10 rinks entered from northern Alberta towns. The dazzling array of prizes for which 148 games will be played throughout the two primary and two secondary competitions of the 'spiel, are on display in Johnstone Walker's.

Owing to an increase in the number of events the draw committee found it necessary to request additional accommodation for the opening day. The Edmonton Curling club has placed eight sheets of ice at the disposal of the curlers. It will be necessary to make four draws each day as far as possible in order to conclude the bonspiel finals by Friday evening. The committee is particularly eager to have all games started on schedule time.

Saturday Banquet Is Gay Affair in Holy Trinity Hall

Holy Trinity Girls' club entertained at the annual Mothers' and Daughters' banquet on Saturday evening in the parish hall of the church. The below zero weather appeared to stimulate the girls to even more than usual gaiety, and it was a very happy party, numbering about 66, that sat down to the long banqueting tables. These were prettily decorated with crimson carnations and tall crimson candles in silver holders. Crimson and silver are the club colors, and the dainty place-cards and favors also followed the same color-scheme.

The girls of the club were the hostesses of the event, planning the menu and making all the arrangements. Miss Kathleen Gilroy, president, was the chairman, welcoming the guests in a cordial little speech; and at the conclusion of the dinner, giving the first toast of the evening—"The King." Other toasts were "The Church," proposed by Miss Alice Clough, and responded to by the Rev. G. G. Reynolds, rector; "The Mothers," proposed by Miss Nora Rymer, with Mrs. Petheram responding; "The Club," proposed by Mrs. G. G. Reynolds, and replied to by Miss Isobel Bull; "Honorary Members," proposed by Miss Gladys Conquest, with Mrs. J. W. Melrose replying.

A short but bright program included, in addition to community singing, piano solos by Miss Winnie Sherwin and Miss Mollie Bowen, a recitation by Miss Joyce Petheram, and two fancy dances by Miss Kathleen Chapman.

During the evening Miss Alice Clough, leader of the club, was presented by Miss Kitty Ross with a little appreciation from the members in the form of a framed picture; and Miss Kathleen Gilroy, president, received a bouquet of pink carnations, the presentation being made by Miss Ivy Chapman.

HERE AND THERE IN WOMEN'S WORK

The Vancouver New Era League wrote recently to the chief of police of that city requesting full particulars and substantiation concerning the rumored appointment of five policewomen on the force. The organization commended the proposed action.

A bill has passed the second chamber in Holland which lays down that the actual domicile of a married woman shall be accounted her official domicile for purposes of the exercise of active and passive franchise. This is the first step towards breaking down the law which rules that a married women has no domicile other than that of her husband. It is now possible, therefore, for the married Dutch woman who lives in Holland with her children while her husband works in the Indies, a common case, to exercise her full political rights.

Mother Gives Art Exhibit

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—"You can find time for anything, if you really love doing it."

Thus simply does Bessie Lasky, wife of the famous movie magnate, Jesse Lasky, explain her incredible feat of producing 50 oil paintings in the past three years, in addition to the exacting demands of her position in movieland, managing two households, one in New York and one in California, and being the adored playfellow-mother of three children.

Mrs. Lasky now is having the second "one-man show" of her paintings at the Anderson gallery. She began painting nine years ago.

"I haven't any system that I have worked out to give me leisure," the impossibly young looking Mrs. Lasky said. "I just make it a rule to be with my husband wherever he goes and to spend much time with the children. But I love to paint so much that I always have a smock, canvas and oils around the corner waiting for me. When we are in New York, I slip into the studio every free moment. In California I work out of doors, week-ends in the Pasedena Hills or the Mojave Desert, or mornings in our garden or in some friend's."

Mrs. Lasky swims, golfs, rides, plays tennis and hikes. But she doesn't play bridge. "And," she added, "I never waste time with a masseuse or a beauty specialist. There are too many things I like to do better.

"I have only one time-saving method that I can think of. That is in buying clothes. Each season I pick a color scheme and the type of thing I want for myself and the three children and buy every single garment, and every accessory at the same time. I never shop between times. That saves days of time to give to things I really like to do."

Star Dust

"Blu-u-e-e ski-i-e-s smi-ling at me"—and they are blue, if you are willing to chance being frozen, like a snowman, on the spot, and look up. Even when the mercury drops to around the fifty below mark, the sun is still high in the heavens, and golden as the late summer wheat.

And the tulips! The windows are full of them, nodding and smiling in their little red flower pots, like gay little Dutch children, in their stiff, perky petal frocks; and such frocks! scarlet and gold in a world of white.

Your heart aches with the very beauty of them, brave against the cold, and laughs at their smiling impudence. There's food for the soul in a simple pot of tulips when the windows are heavy with frost and the tres are black and bare.

I really think Edmonton is happy again, now that there is something to complain about and wonder over and marvel at in the cold weather.

* * *

"If it would only get cold!" wailed the citizenry when snows were melting and days slipped in and out noiselessly and without freezing weather.

And then, all of a sudden, crack, boom, bam! and the mercury dropped. Edmonton began to look cheerfully red-faced and took to woolens.

The west could be depended upon after all, to go cold in January, and stamping and rubbing of numbed fingers and shivering were quite in order.

"I've never seen weather like this before, and I've lived here for twenty years," is the favorite greeting, as the mercury refuses to be coaxed upward.

Cars may freeze and water pipes burst and furnaces require constant attention; but here is something the westerner is used to. These are his accustomed trials and tribulations, and he fights them with a good heart. Winter comes like an enemy, perhaps but he comes in the open. One is prepared to meet his onslaught; and there is a sort of stern joy in faring forth, muffled to the eyebrows, and feeling the blood tingle and the pace quicken as the coldness wraps one about.

But dull, sloppy days and 'flu! . . . Against this one is helpless.

And if the cold is too unbearable, and the house won't heat, and the food freezes in the cupboards. . . try taking home a pot of red and yellow tulips.

Montreal Husband Wanted to Teach His Wife a Good Lesson

Got Two Years in Penitentiary for Cruel Methods

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 28.—Flying into a towering rage because his wife talked back at him, Richard Chagnon, alias Chagnyo, seized her by the throat, dragged her to the bathroom and held her down, while he let the water flow from both taps. The women was almost suffocated when neighbors, hearing the cries, came rushing to the rescue.

The husband appeared before Chief Judge Perrault, and pleaded guilty to grievous assault on his wife. "I only wanted to give her a lesson," he explained.

"Yes, and you will get a lesson," replied the judge. "You almost succeeded in drowning and choking your wife. The finger-marks are still visible on her throat. I could order you to be lashed. Your sentence is two years in the penitentiary."

There was a crash, followed by another. Both husband and wife had collapsed.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 28.—A local alderman has asked the Board of Control to decide what a kennel is. A woman keeps three Russian wolf hounds, for which she has licenses, he stated, and had been summoned on several occasions, yet he claimed she was not keeping a kennel.

The Mayor: "Get the property Commissioner. The courts should decide what is a kennel."

"There is no definition of a kennel anywhere, I believe," the alderman replied.

Hebrew Musical Club Sponsors Extravaganza In Three Acts

Third Annual Offering Scores Marked Success at Talmud Torah

Sponsored by the Hebrew Musical Club and Dramatic Society, a musical extravaganza in three acts was produced at the Talmud Torah hall, 103rd street, on Sunday evening, with unqualified success. It was the third annual offering of this organization and proved even more popular than its predecessors.

Songs, choruses, dances and sketches were included in the program, all of which found high favor with the audience that jammed the hall to overflowing.

A dance by Dena Bloomfield and Freda Rodnunsky, combined with a song by Ted Levitt and chorus, 'Pickin' Cotton," sent the extravaganza off to a good start. Ella Cristall charmed the audience with her excellent singing of "Jeannine," in which she was assisted by C. Nelson, G. Margolus and T. Levitt.

A one act comedy sketch, "Lapse of Memory," in which Minnie Wershof, Bill Goldberg and Sara Wainberg appeared, produced many laughs and gave the trio every opportunity for displaying decided talent.

Introduced by C. Nelson, a ballet of flowers next appeared and found high favor.

Shows Promise

Then followed much first-class singing. Evelyn Nozick and L. Bricker combined in "The Girl Is You and the Boy Is Me" and the "Miserere" from "Il Trovatore," and Miss Nozick sang Luiggi Luzzi's "Ave Maria" and, with full chorus, the "Italian Street Song" from "Naughty Marietta." Miss Nozick has a charming voice, which at all times fell pleasantly on the ear. She is a singer of whom more should be heard. Mr. Bricker was heard to good advantage in "The Gypsy Love Song" and "La Primevere".

Sophie Ratner gave a first-class interpretation of "Sunny Boy" and "There's a Rainbow Round My Shoulder," singing sweetly throughout. She was ably assisted by C. Nelson and chorus. Miss Ratner was later heard in "I Dreamt I Dwelt," revealing an appealing soprano of wide range and pure quality.

S. Gordon and chorus gave a stirring and highly artistic rendition of "Song of the Vagabonds," following which Ida Baltzan scored in a tambourine dance.

Lillian Tarnow registered one of the big hits of the evening with her most excellent singing of "Allah's Holiday," a difficult but melodious song. Estelle Cohen and chorus of girls sang "Rio Rita" in an ingratiating manner and had to repeat it.

The full chorus was excellent in the "Anvil Chorus," "Sound the Loud Trumpet," and the 'Soldiers' Chorus" from "Faust."

A comedy sketch, "Not Lost," in which Max Garfin, Bob Smolkin and Bill Goldberg appeared, showed all three to have a genuine sense of humor which they developed to the utmost.

Orchestra Was Impressive

In addition to the above, the chorus consisted of Celia Margolus, Ann Brow, Ethel Dunn, Lottie Newhouse, Miriam Binder, Florence Liskear, Masha Nelson, Maurice Shaw, Irving Lyons and Sam Brown.

Max Fratkin conducted the orchestra and chorus with outstanding success, producing impressive effects at all times.

Mrs. H. Bloomfield, Angela Levine, Miss J. Newhouse, Ella Cristall and Ida Baltzan all deserve much credit for their efforts in making the evening a success.

With this creditable effort to its credit the society can be reasonably expected to make further progress in its fourth annual offering next year.

Thinks Victorian Order Deserves to Be Subsidized

Canadian Press

HAMILTON, Ont., Jan. 28—At the regional conference of the Victorian Order, held in this city, Dr. Grant Fleming, of Montreal emphasized the importance of home nursing and, referring to the work of the Victorian Order of Nurses, said: "Here is a nursing service, the need and value of which are established. Should such a service not be a responsibility?" He thought the order should be subsidized by governments on a service basis.

"'Pop' Kastor"

The Bulletin's Daily Short Story from Real Life

By EDWARD ETTINGER

The Cast of Characters in "Pop Kastor"

POP KASTOR is one of those 60-year-old messenger boys one sees occasionally in New York. His daughter, MARILYN TILTON, is a musical comedy star. The two have been separated for years. Marilyn eventually locates the old man and establishes him in her richly furnished apartment. But the old man doesn't think much of the life of Reilly.

We had just passed a 60-year-old messenger boy. New York has quite a number of them—short wizened, gray-haired men with dull eyes and wrinkled faces. You can see them in some of the Western Union telegraph offices sitting on the bench, in their not too clean uniforms, alongside of 16-year-old boys fresh from school.

"That is tragic," I remarked to my companion, Detective Geraty.

"Maybe," he said with a peculiar emphasis on the word.

"I don't see how it can be anything else," I answered, irritably. "It surely isn't a happy sight to see an old man no doubt friendless, trudging the streets in rain and snow in order to earn a boy's pay."

The detective smiled.

"I happen to know one of these messenger boys," he said. "It's a very interesting story. Would you like to hear it?"

"By all means."

About a year ago, Geraty received a telephone call from Marilyn Tilton, the musical comedy star. She asked him to call at her apartment but make no mention of it to any one. She spoke in a low voice that portended something mysterious.

Geraty hopped into a taxi and reached her apartment within twenty minutes. Marilyn, with her beautiful blonde hair and blue eyes, looked even prettier off the stage than on it. At the time, she was engaged to the South American millionaire whom she later married.

"Is any one bothering you?" Geraty asked as he eyed the luxurious apartment filled with gifts from her betrothed.

"No. It's really a family matter I called you for," she spoke in a musical voice. "I'll have to tell you something about my personal history first so you'll understand it.

"I was born in a small town in Indiana. My mother was a big, tall strapping woman. She was Swedish. That's where I get my blonde hair. My father was a short, thin man with blue eyes. I sometimes wonder how in the world he ever came to marry my mother.

Henpecked

"When I grew up, I realized that it was she who did the proposing. Father was meek and timid. Mother was bold and domineering. She just twisted him around her little finger. If there ever was a henpecked man in this world, it was my father. He couldn't even call his soul his own.

"Mother was very mean. She made father wash the dishes, scrub the floors and do all the housework. And if it didn't suit her, she didn't hesitate a minute to box his ears. I really think that the only reason she married him was because she knew she could boss him. I'm sure she never loved.

"Father led a miserable existence. She broke his spirit and every bit of manhood that he had.

"One day he went to the store to buy some groceries and lost the dollar she had given him. Mother was furious. She told him to go out and find that dollar or never show his face in the house again.

"I guess father was afraid of what she might do to him because he never came home. He disappeared as if off the face of the earth. That was twelve years ago. I was a kid of eight at the time, the youngest of six children.

"Yesterday when I drove down 5th ave. I saw father. At least I feel sure it was he."

"Didn't you stop to ask?" Geraty inquired.

"I—I couldn't," she said slowly. "I was with some friends and—"

"I understand," Geraty interrupted. "He didn't look very prosperous, did he?"

"No. And it would have been rather embarrassing to call him father. You see, he was a Western Union messenger boy."

Geraty raised his eyebrows in amazement.

"You are sure?" he asked.

"Yes. He was quite gray, but I recognized him immediately. What I want you to do, Mr. Geraty, is to find him and have him give up his job. Tell him about me, if he hasn't already recognized my pictures in the papers. I'll give you enough money to buy him some clothes so he'll look presentable. Then you can bring him up to my apartment. I'd like to make up for all the years he has suffered. I could put enough money in trust for him so he'll be able to live in comfort for the rest of his days."

"Whereabouts did you see him?" Geraty asked.

"It was near 22nd st. So he must be working somewhere in the neighborhood."

"And what is his name?"

"Charles Kastor. His eyes are like mine. That ought to help you a little."

Geraty made a tour of the telegraph offices in the Times Square section and found that there were quite a number of these old messenger boys. In an office on Broadway he found Marilyn's father. The man had not changed his name at all. He was known to every one in the office as Pop Kastor.

At first Pop denied that he was related in any way to Marilyn, but later admitted it. He asked about the others of his family, and Geraty gave him the desired information. His wife was dead, but the children were all well.

Side by side the two left the office and walked into a clothing store. Geraty ordered the best, as befitted the father of a successful musical comedy star. He bought him a liberal supply of socks and shirts and underwear and everything else he could think of.

Pop shed his uniform and his old clothes in the little dressing room in the rear of the store and emerged in his new clothing, a neat and tidy old man. Geraty felt sure that Marilyn would not be ashamed to asknowledge him.

They got into a taxi and rode over to Marilyn's apartment. Geraty had previously phoned that they were coming.

"I'm not going up with you," the detective said to Pop. "I don't want to butt in on a family renuion. Take the elevator and get off at the fourth floor. Her apartment is 4D."

They shook hands, and Geraty left. The next day the detective found a check in his mail for $300 for services rendered. Evidently the renuion had been a great success.

A month passed. Geraty had been busy on a jewelry store robbery and forgot all about Marilyn and Pop. It only came back to him when he read a big spread in the paper that Marilyn was marrying the South American millionaire and intended to give up the stage and live in Paris.

A day later he received a telephone call from Marilyn.

"Please," she begged him, "come up to see me at once."

When he got there, he found her in tears.

"Where's Pop?" he asked.

"Gone," she said tragically. "He left the house yesterday and hasn't returned yet. I didn't want to report it to the police because I'm afraid of the notoriety. You know all about us, so I thought I would appeal to you first."

"Is there anything missing?"

"No. He didn't take anything with him. All he has is the clothes on his back. I'm afraid something happened to him. Perhaps an accident."

"Maybe he walked out the way he did on your mother?" Geraty suggested.

"Oh, no. There was no reason for it. I was awfully good to him. I let him have all the money he wanted. He had a lovely room and excellent food. What more could he ask for? And I was going to take him to Paris with me."

"Well," said Geraty, "I'll investigate."

A Commuter

"Please do it quickly," Marilyn said. "I'm leaving for Paris next week. Spare no expense, Mr. Geraty. I'll pay all the bills. Oh, I hope nothing has happened to him. It would be a shame for him to die just when he was beginning to enjoy life. I'm sure he must have been happy here."

"Just be patient," Geraty calmed her. "I think I'll find him."

"If you do, I'll send you a check for $500."

It didn't seem possible to Geraty that Pop had met with an accident. As a messenger boy, thee old man was used to dodging taxis and trucks. So Geraty didn't waste any time visiting the morgues.

Instead, he went down to the telegraph office where he had first found Pop. There were a number of boys sitting on the bench, but Pop was not among them.

Geraty walked up to the man in charge who stood behind the counter.

"Where is Pop Kastor?" he asked.

The man looked the detective over carefully and then said, "He isn't with us any more."

"Are you sure?' 'Geraty asked, flashing his badge.

The man turned color for the moment. He had a deep respect for the law.

"Why, what do you want him for?" he asked.

"I want to have a talk with him. Where is he?"

The man hesitated for a moment.

"He is out with a message,' 'he said.

"So!" Geraty remarked. "He didn't waste any time at all, did he? Came right back to his job, eh?"

"Were you sent here by his daughter?' 'the man asked.

"Yes. Do you know all about Pop?"

"Sure. He told me the whole story when he came back for the job. Listen, can't you go back and say he isn't here? What's the idea in breaking the old man's heart? He'd rather stay here than in her house."

"When do you expect him back?" Geraty asked.

"In about twenty minutes."

"All right. I'll wait for him."

The minutes dragged by slowly. A half hour passed. No sign of Pop. An hour passed. No sign of Pop. Geraty had a feeling that he had been double crossed. That some one had tipped Pop off that the detective was waiting for him.

In turned out to be true, too. The man in charge had posted one of the boys near the office to warn Pop.

Geraty got up from his chair and left the office. He knew where Pop boarded because he had gone there with him after he had bought Pop the new clothes.

When he rang the bell Mother Wilson, the owner, opened the door. Born and reared in the white light district, she could tell a detective a mile away. She spotted Geraty before he opened his mouth.

"Is Pop in?" he asked.

"No. He moved out yesterday. Went to Philadelphia."

Geraty grinned.

"I suppose he's commuting to his job every day. They must be paying messenger boys big wages. Listen, Ma. I know that Pop is still in the house. Now be a good girl and let me go in and talk to him."

Mother Wilson couldn't make up her mind what to do. She was saved the trouble, however, by Pop himself, who came up behind her.

"Let him in, Ma," Pop said. "I'd like to talk to him."

Ma stood aside and let Geraty come in.

The trio sat down in the parlor. Mother Wilson looking daggers at the detective.

"Why did you run away?" Geraty asked.

"Aw, gee!" Pop answered. "I was miserable there. Of course, Marilyn meant to do what's right, but I couldn't stand it. She had me dressing for this and dressing for that. I felt like a clothing dummy. Then she butted in on my personal habits. Didn't like me to roll my own cigarettes. Insisted that I buy them by the box. She let me buy the best, but I didn't like them as well as those I rolled myself.

"She bought me all kinds of fancy books and kicked when she caught me reading the dime novels. Gee! I couldn't stand it without a detective story in my back pocket. And when it came to eatin', it was use your knife on this, or your fork on that. Honest, I would have swapped any one of them fancy meals for a good hot dog with mustard.

"If that's what they call livin', then I'd rather pass out of the picture. Honest, Mr. Geraty, you can't imagine the kick I got when I slipped back into the uniform.

"Honest, Mr. Geraty, I don't want to go back. If she ever drags me over to Paris I'll die. Please be a good sport. Tell her you couldn't find me. She'll go away and be happy with that South American, and I'll be happy here with Ma and the boys down at the office."

A Bribe.

"Come out in the hall a minute," he said to the detective. "I want to tell you something private. You'll excuse us, Ma?"

Geraty went out into the hall with Pop. He never returned to the parlor. Instead, he went to Marilyn's apartment and told her that he could not find Pop. He advised her to go abroad and let him continue with the search. If he ever found Pop he would let her know.

"That's quite a story, isn't it?" Geraty said when he finished.

"Yes, and you lost $500 on the deal, didn't you? I asked.

"That's because I was sentimental. I sometimes get that way. Guess I'll leave you now."

"Wait a minute," I put my hand on his arm. "What did Pop say to you in the hall when he called you out?"

"He tried to bribe me," Geraty said. "He took out a dollar and fifty-four cents. It was all he had in the world, and he offered it to me if I wouldn't take him back."

Little Stories For Bedtime

Peter Rabbit Begins to Have Doubts

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

(Copyright)

Peter Rabbit had been very much excited when he had seen poor helpless Mrs. Grouse carried away by Farmer Brown's Boy. When he had led Farmer Brown's Boy to the place where Mrs. Grouse was a prisoner under the hard icy snow-crust he had supposed that when he broke through it Mrs. Grouse would promptly fly away. He hadn't dreamed that she was too weak to fly. And so when she had been picked up and carried off Peter hadn't known what to think. Somehow he felt quite sure that no harm would come to her, for ever since he had seen Tommy Tit the Chickadee eat from the hand of Farmer Brown's Boy, Peter had thought more kindly of him. And then, too, during these hard times when food was so hard to find Farmer Brown's Boy had left cabbage leaves and turnips and carrots where Peter Rabbit could find them. No, he couldn't believe that any harm was going to come to Mrs. Grouse and he said as much to everyone who repeated to him the dreadful, false story Sammy Jay had told of how Mrs. Grouse had been killed and taken home by Farmer Brown's Boy for his dinner.

But when one day went by, and then another and another without any sign of Mrs. Grouse, and when Tommy Tit had made several trips up to Farmer Brown's dooryard and reported that he saw nothing of Mrs. Grouse, although he looked everywhere, Peter began to have doubts. Yes, sir, Peter began to have doubts. He even went up to the doorward himself one moonlight night without any result save to have a terrible scare when Bowser the Hound surprised him and drove him into the Old Stone Wall off the adge of the Old Orchard.

"What did I tell you?" asked Sammy with a wicked chuckle.

Every day Sammy Jay hunted up Peter and said unpleasant things. "What did I tell you?" said Sammy with a wicked chuckle. "What did I tell you, Peter Rabbit? If Mrs. Grouse hasn't been killed and eaten, where is she? What has become of her? Tell me that!"

Of course Peter couldn't. It was what he wanted to know himself. All he could say was, "I don't believe it, and you haven't any business to tell such dreadful stories when you don't know any more about it than I do; so there, Sammy Jay!"

Sammy would fly away laughing a harsh, unpleasant laugh. It always tickles him to tease Peter and make him feel uncomfortable. And Peter did feel uncomfortable. You see, in spite of himself, that little doubt kept growing and growing. He just couldn't help it. Peter wouldn't harm anybody for the world, and he wouldn't bring harm to anybody, not even to Reddy or Old Granny Fox. Unless it was to save his life and yet he had reason enough to wish them harm, for they had given him enough terrible frights to have made any kind of bad wishes excusable. But Peter isn't that kind. And now he was beginning to blame himself for having led Farmer Brown's Boy to the place where Mrs. Grouse had been a prisoner.

"She might have got out some other way," said Peter to himself, though right down in his heart he felt sure that she couldn't have. "Oh, dear, I wish I knew what has become of her. I don't believe any harm has come to her, and yet—and yet—dear me, I just don't know what to believe."

"Just think the best of every one;
You'll find it always pays,
It helps folks try to do their best
And mend their evil ways."

It was Tommy Tit speaking, and you know Tommy practices what he preaches. Peter sighed. "I'm trying to Tommy. I'm trying to! But what do you suppose has become of Mrs. Grouse? Sometimes I think she is safe and sometimes I think — well, I don't know what I do think. I'm full of doubts," said Peter.

"Dee, dee, think the best, Peter! Think the best! That's what I do." And with this Tommy Tit flew over to the Old Orchard.

DOROTHY DIX

"The Wise Way is Both to Save and to Spend," Declares Dorothy Dix—Can This Young Man Escape His Fate?—Why a Man Can't Say "I'm Sorry"

DEAR MISS DIX.—I married a man whom I loved madly and still do. I gave up a fine position with a liberal salary when I married, and for the first few years we lived on a mere pittance. Together we struggled. I did all of our housework and not only made a comfortable home for him and our little girl, but I helped him in every way, teaching him how to improve his English, and doing his secretarial work. That was all right. To sacrifice to the limit was a joy for his sake, and he always told me how easy he would make life for me when he succeeded.

Well, he has succeeded. He has been making good money for some years, but he expects me to live almost as cheaply as we did when we were so poor and had to pinch so hard.

I have reasoned with him to no avail. I think we ought to spend more, as life is short enough at best, but he thinks we ought to live as cheaply as possible. His ambition is to lay up for the future, but I think we ought to have some pleasure since we can afford it now, and yet save a quarter of our income.

A SCOTCHMAN'S WIFE.

Answer:

You are right and your husband is dead wrong. Thrift is one of the virtues that can be easily turned into a vice, and that is what he is doing. He is developing the miser spirit, and that is not only unfair and unjust in its effect on you, but it will harden his own soul so that there will be nothing left in him that is lovable.

There seems to be no other one thing in which it is more difficult to achieve the happy medium than in the use of money. Nearly every one is either too extravagant or too penurious. Nearly every hand either throws money away or holds it in a death grip. It is only the few who possess the art of spending money wisely and well.

Indisputably it is the first duty of every man and woman to save enough of their income to make an umbrella for the rainy day that is sure to come to us all, and to lay up enough to make them independent in their old age.

Not to do this is to bring down misfortune upon their own heads, for none are so forlorn and miserable as the down-and-outers, and the old who have to depend upon the charity of their friends. Also it is as dishonest as any other hold-up, for somebody has to provide for those who would not provide for themselves. Somebody has to feed and clothe and house those who have spent their own money in riotous living.

Therefore, it is the bounden duty of every one to put apart a certain per cent. of their income to safeguard their future, but it is just as much a duty to spend the balance of their income on making life easier and pleasanter for themselves and their families.

It is folly to deny oneself every present pleasure in the expectation that years hence one will have one's fling, yet we see people doing that continually. We see people living in miserable houses without a comfort or a luxury, or even a decent bed to lie on, because they are piling up the pennies with which to build a palace some time in the future.

We see people denying themselves the little trip that they would like to take, and that might actually save their lives, because they are saving up to take a tour around the world when they are old. We see people who go shabby and eat poor, coarse, rough food because they are scrimping and saving so that they may walk in silk attire and feast on nightingales' tongues when they have acquired a fortune.

The irony of it all is that after they have hoarded every nickel and done without everything they wanted, and have made their fortune, they have lost the power to enjoy it. They have atrophied their desires so that they no longer want anything, or take pleasure in anything. They have got their nuts when they have lost their teeth. Their feast comes after their appetite and digestion have gone.

So the wise way is both to save and to spend. Put some money in the savings bank, but also invest some in good clothes and amusements and a comfortable living as you go along. We pass this way but once, and there will be no pockets in our shrouds.

DOROTHY DIX.

* * * * * * * * *

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a young man of 24 and have been engaged to a young lady for nearly a year. I do not love her and I feel as if I would rather die than marry her, and yet I do not know how to get out of it. She dragged me into this mess. From the day we first met she has dogged my steps. I am easy-going, and when she would ring me up and ask me to come to see her, I would go. She proposed to me. She does all of the love-making. She knows I don't even care for her, but she is determined to marry me and I am afraid it will break her heart if I back out of the match. What can I do?

M.M.

Answer: I should say that flight is your only salvation. Otherwise this determined young lady will drag you to the altar and keep you under her thumb ever after.

Your case is interesting because it shows what poor, helpless creatures men are when a woman who means business really goes after them. They seem to have no way of defending themselves and tamely submit to their fate without even putting up a fight.

Why a man feels that he has to go to see a girl just because she telephones him, goodness only knows. If he had spirit enough to say boo to a goose, he would decline her invitation, if he didn't want to go. Yet thousands of men let girls badger them into coming to see them and taking them to places, just because they haven't the courage to refuse.

Nor can anybody imagine a man not having nerve enough to say "no" and stick to it when a girl pops the question to him and asks him to assume her board bill and shopping ticket for life, but nine out of ten just succumb without a struggle. And if they do hesitate and the woman cries, they knock under.

Whether it is because it flatters their vanity to know that a woman loves them and to think that they are such good things that she weeps for them, or whether they have not yet mastered the technique of saying "this is so sudden" and asking for time to think it over, or whether they lack the hardihood to tell the woman that wants them for a husband that they will be a brother to them, no one knows. One only knows that the woman who goes after a man generally gets him.

Which augurs well for the day when women will take the initiative in love-making.

Dear Miss Dix—Why is it so hard for men to say "I am sorry" when there has been a family fuss and they have been in the wrong? Don't they ever feel like saying it? Why does the woman always have to baby the man and do the making up? Why does a wife have to treat a husband as carefully and diplomatically as if she were walking on eggs if she wants a happy home, while he feels free to knock her faults as much as he pleases?

DISCOURAGED WIFE.

Answer: A man hates to apologize to his wife, even when he knows he has been wrong, because it hurts his vanity. It is somehow, necessary to his self-esteem to feel superior to her, and he thinks he would lower his prestige in her eyes if he admitted the possibility of making a mistake.

I have known men whose apologies would take the form of jewels or flowers or a new dress or a fur coat, something that would cost a lot of money, but they would never say "I am sorry."

For the same reason a woman has to lend her husband a hand to help him dismount gracefully from the high horse he has got on in a family spat. He wants to come down and kiss and make up, but he hates to take the initiative, and so the wife has to say that she is sorry, and she knows that she was unreasonable, and will he please forgive her for his having such a bad temper and saying the things he dod say.

Whether husbands don't know that wives see through them, that wives sigh as they say to themselves: "Oh, dear, here I've got to pet and cajole John into a good humor again, and tell him how wonderful he is, when he has acted like a bad child and needs a spanking." I don't know. Probably they do, but they know their wives have too much sense ever to tell them the truth about it, and they let it go at that.

Every wife finds out, sooner or later, that there is something of the little boy that never dies in a man. He has to suppress this out in the world, but it is his salient characteristic at home, and that is why a wise woman learns not to take her husband too seriously.

Half of his faults are little boy faults and she deals with them best when she deals with him exactly as she does her little Bobby and Tommy—when she shuts her eyes to a lot of his weaknesses and ignores him when he sulks, and kisses him and loves him and doesn't try to treat him like a grown-up man.

Mannequin Sues for Injury Sustained in Jerky Street Car

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 28.—Alleging that a T.T.C. motorman's roughness in starting a street car resulted in permanent injury to herself, Miss Lillian M. Elliott, a fashion mannequin has filed at Osgoode hall, a writ claiming $25,000 damages from the transportation commission.

Miss Elliott declares that on June 4, last, after she had boarded a street car at Bloor and Yonge and paid her fare, she was thrown to the floor by a sudden and violent jerk in starting the street car. She says that she was looking for a seat at the time.

Her injuries were such, she continues, that she has been compelled to cancel various contracts to exhibit clothes. She claims that she may never be able to walk normally again.

The commission, in a statement of defense, claims that it has no knowledge whatever of the circumstances set forth by the plaintiff.

What's What

By HELEN DECIE

"M. N." has invited an old school friend to spend a week with her. The visitor will arrive on an afternoon train at a time when neither the husband nor the son will be at home. Would it be proper to let her find her way after writing explicit directions to her, or should a taxi be ordered to meet her at the station, which is only three squares from the house? M. N. has no maid. How should the visitor be entertained before the men arrive?

If possible, M. N. should meet her friend at the train, with or without a taxicab. Since the distance is so short, it would be easy to walk from station to house in favorable weather. The hostess carries the suitcase, unless it is extra heavy, in which case a taxi may be engaged.

Having no maid, M. N. must prepare the dinner, and cannot entertain her guest at the same time. It is enough to take her to the guest room and to leave her there to rest and to dress, after telling her the hour for dinner.

Lois Leeds Answers Beauty Questions of Edmonton Women

M. R.: You are a tall girl for your age. (2) The ideal weight for your age and height is between 119 and 135 pounds. (3) Yes, I think you need to gain about 10 more pounds. Include one quart of milk extra in your diet every day. See that you have at least eight or nine hours of sleep every night. Plenty of rest, fresh air and plain nourishing food will help you to gain weight. I shall be pleased to send you my leaflet on gaining weight, if you will write me again. Enclose a self-addressed and stamped envelope and repeat your request. (4) Your arms and legs will fill out and develop as you take on more weight. (5) Bathe the nose in the following lotion at bedtime: Two tablespoonsful lemon juice, two ounces glycerine, six ounces rosewater. Shake well. Apply with a clean pad of absorbent cotton and allow it to dry on the skin. (6) With light brown hair, blue eyes and fair complexion you may wear sapphire and turquoise blue, peacock and Delft blue, pinkish tan and golden browns, blue-green, bluish lavender, pale yellow and pale pink. Deep red with dark brown hair. You can also dull brick, rust, soft tones in green, peach and cream.

Mrs. S. H.: Astringents are used to tone up the skin after removing cream, and to correct oily complexions which are usually the ones with enlarged facial pores. One should be careful, however, when using too astringent lotion that it will not be too harsh on one's skin. The warm witch hazel pack is a splendid cleansing and tightening lotion for enlarged pores. First cleanse the skin with cleansing cream. Remove excess cream. Wring out a small Turkish towel in hot water and hold it over the face. Repeat the application six or seven times. Massage your face with a little tissue cream for several minutes. Wipe off excess cream. Make a pad of absorbent cotton. Warm about one-half cupful of witch hazel. Moisten the pad in the hot liquid and apply it over the face. Leave the eyes and nostrils uncovered. Leave on half an hour or so. Dip a medium sized Turkish towel in hot water. Fold it to cover the whole mask and lay it over the mask. Before the towel has cooled replace it with another hot towel. Remove towel and mask. Blot the face dry with a clean, soft towel. Apply a skin lotion and allow it to dry on the skin. This finishes the treatment at bedtime. If, however, make-up is to be used afterwards a powder base of foundation cream should be applied. A touch of cream rouge and finally a light dusting with face powder.

Mrs. G. F.: The ideal weight for your age and height is between 150 and 140 pounds. (2) You may wear chestnut and seal, pastel tints, dull, old blue and midnight blue, dark tones in green, bronze, greens, grape, deep russet, old rose, wild rose, orchid, silver gray, ivory and creamy flesh, black if relieved with flesh, old rose, or touches of blue is excellent. Avoid vivid shades. Choose soft shades for your type. (3) I shall be pleased to mail you my leaflet on care of the hands. Write me again and enclose a self-addressed and stamped envelope, so that I may send it.

WEAK FEET

The average woman's aversion to taking walks out-of-doors is largely due to the condition of her feet. Walking is no pleasure unless the feet are comfortable and suitably shod, yet this form of exercise is one of the most convenient and beneficial.

Foot troubles may be due to a variety of causes. The wearing of poorly shaped shoes is the leading one. When the shoes are too short, too narrow for the foot and with heels excessively high, milady must pay the penalty in deformed and painful feet. Other causes of weak feet include incorrect posture, the habit of walking with toes turned out, a general poor tone of the muscles due to ill-health or old age, overweight, prolonged standing on hard floors, and, in the case of young people, rapid growth that makes the body too heavy for the undeveloped feet to support.

Whatever one's foot troubles may be, the advice of a foot specialist should be sought. An orthopedic surgeon or a podiatrist can prescribe the kind of treatments needed to restore the feet to normal. It is a grave mistake to try to prescribe shoes and foot correction devices for oneself without scientific guidance.

Flatfoot occurs frequently in different stages of development. It begins with a weakening of the arches. Pains are often felt in the feet, legs and back. Oftentimes pains that are mistaken for rheumatism or some sort of kidney or spinal trouble have been traced to weak feet. Treatments for this condition begin with the use of special shoes with broad toes and low heels. The inside edges of heels and soles are built higher than the outer edges so that the weight of the body may be thrown on the outer side of the feet. Correct posture is also important. Feet must be pointed toward the front, not outward. Sometimes it is necessary to strap the feet or use a cast or other device under the doctor's direction.

Exercise also plays a part in strengthening weak arches. Stand with shoes off and slowly raise the heels. When lowering the heels the weight of the body should be on the outer sides. Picking up marbles with the toes is another good foot exercise. Walking pigeon-toed on a thick, sponge-rubber mat is helpful if at each step the toes are curled under and the weight is kept on the outer sides of the feet. One of the principal objections to tight shoes is that they prevent this curling motion of the toes which gives elasticity to one's tread.

In speaking of foot troubles we must not forget the part played by stockings short in the foot. They cramp the feet almost as much as too-short shoes. Stockings should be at least a quarter inch longer than the foot to allow for the spread of the foot in walking.

BROILED MUSHROOMS

This most nourishing vegetable could very readily take the place of meat at any meal. Clean and peel mushrooms and place on an earthenware dish, cap side down. Season with a little butter and salt and broil until the juices start to run from the mushrooms. Remove from the oven, cover for about 2 minutes and then serve.

GRIDDLE CAKES

An easy, good and quick way of making griddle cakes and, as griddle cakes are usually made in a hurry, you will probably use this recipe many times. One egg, 2 cups of milk, 1 tablespoon melted butter, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 tablespoon sugar, a pinch of salt and flour enough to make a nice batter. Bake on a hot well-greased griddle.

Air your mattresses and pillows on windy days. Brush them carefully, at least once a fortnight and thoroughly air in the sun.

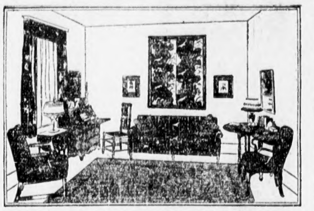
YOUR HOME AND YOU

Red, Yellow, Blue, Have A Place In Furnishing House



In this room of northern exposure, the desk, desk-chair, pillows and gate-leg table are bright red, and the walls and ceiling golden yellow. The rug is a deep brown, as is the chair at the right. The chair at the left is upholstered in dark green.

By WILLIAM H. WILSON

Before taking up the study of color in its relation to house furnishing, it is first necessary to give a brief outline of the most important points of the spectrum. Today we shall consider three primary colors.

Let us take red as our first choice and dissect it. It is warm, vigorous, vital, and makes more impression upon the consciousness than any other color. In large quantities, it is out of place in any save a large room, for its very essence makes things it adorns appear smaller. It fits the barbaric, the Spanish type of room better than any other. A brilliant color such as red is most effectively used in small quantities as interesting accents in a cool gray or neutral toned room. Small red figures in a damask curtain, a bowl or vase of crimson pottery—a quilted cushion of satin, these, if properly chosen, are sufficient to awaken a too sober room into stimulating beauty.

Yellow is another warm color. Its use lightens up the room in which it is used and light shining through yellow curtains gives the pleasing effect of sunlight in a room with few windows, or in a dull room with a northern exposure. However, care should be taken to avoid giving the appearance of garishness or fiery warmth.

Blue is cool. It is the color of the sea and the sky. It is appropriately used in rooms having southern exposures. Too much blue is to be avoided, however, or the effect will be depressing. In a bed-room, for example, where draperies, bedspread and dresser scarf are of blue, it is well to choose a neutral cream or gray for the side walls with woodwork of ivory or white. Then if black candlesticks holding candles of orange or crimson are placed on either side of the mirror the dominating color of blue used in the room will seem doubly attractive because of the contrasting accents.

There are just two kinds of meat to consider, a good cook told me the other day. "Tough meat and tender meat," she added, before I had a chance to ask for an explanation.

But from the point of vitw of the one who eats the meat, there should of course be but one sort of meat. One hears sorts of strange dietary doctrins nowadays, but I have never heard any one advise eating meat as tough as possible.

It is agreed that tough meat is just as wholesome and just as nourishing as the sort that is tender from the first. Tender meat comes from the parts of the body that have less exercise—and hence have thinner connective tissues. Tough meats come from the parts that have abundant exercise. The reason why the brest and wings of chickens are so tender is because these birds don't do much flying.

Long slow cooking is needed to make tough meat tender, so if you are planning a stew or other type of of meat dish that may be cooked in this way don't waste your money on higher-priced, tender cuts. Some women boast that they use the best cut of round steak even for stews. They might just as well use a tougher cut if they know how to cook it.

The old-fashioned practise of beating tougher cuts of meat with a beef mallet before cooking is a good one because this treatment tends to break down the fibers. This should be done on a floured board and the flour that catches the juice should be used with the meat.

Dear Home Lover: Can you tell me how to make peanut butter fudge? Here is my recipe: Mix well two cups of granulated or confectioner's sugar with one-half cup of cold, sweet milk and two heaping tablespoons of peanut butter. Boil this mixture exactly five minutes, then remove from the fire and beat till it thickens. Now put it into a buttered pan and cut into squares when cool.

VISCOUNT BYNG MAKES HIMSELF FELT IN FORCE

Staging Great Cleanup of Undesirables in London —Reforming Police

By HENRY SOMERVILLE
Special Despatch to The Edmonton Bulletin (Copyright)

LONDON, Jan. 28.—It would hardly be the pure truth to say that Lord Byng of Vimy was made Chief Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police because a new broom was needed to sweep the shady corners of the West End of London. It happens to be a fact that since he was installed at Scotland Yard there has been a campaign against illegal night clubs, disorderly houses and alleged grafters amongst the police in that part of London which is most given over to fashion, luxury and pleasure, but Lord Byng was wanted for wider purposes than raids on the West End.

Britain has always been very careful to promote close and friendly relations between police and public. The guiding principle has been that public and police should have confidence in each other and should co-operate in the enforcement of the law. Of recent years the relations between police and public have not been as good as they formerly were. The spread of motoring has had something to do with it, for the police have had to interfere with citizens engaged in motoring more often than they ever had to do with honest people in any other capacity. Motorists who found themselves trapped for speeding or stopped just after their license had expired which they had forgotten to renew, waxed sarcastic at the activities of the police on the roads, and compared it with their failures to stop burglaries.

Fourteen a Day

The police, and even the burglars, might plead that as 14 persons a day are, on an average, killed by motors, the watch against speeding was as important as the prevention of housebreaking, but irritated motorists are not apt to appreciate this viewpoint.

The police have also caused a grievance by retaining a war-mind in peace time. During the war the traditional British safeguards of the liberty of the subject were relaxed and the first rule was not the protection of the innocent but the conviction of the guilty. The police themselves deny any change in their methods and mentality compared with pre-war days, and doubtless they are unconscious of the change, but the fact remains that since the war persons after arrest have been making long and detailed confessions, which has been the chief evidence leading to their conviction. Such confessions were very rare things before the war, and the legal profession and the public have no doubt whatever that the police have got the habit of using threats or inducements to make public talk.

Habitual Perjury

There were also allegations of habitual perjury and graft on the part of the police. One does not wish to be unjust and to magnify gossip or isolated cases into general scandals. Bribery by street bookmakers of the policeman at the corner has certainly been notorious. It has also become a common thing for a policeman to accept a tip from a motorist who parks his car a little too long in a street. There have been the most detailed charges in the House of Commons by a member who is an experienced journalist that the majority of London newspapers regularly bribe officers at Scotland Yard in order to obtain advance breaks of news. Of more serious scandals, apart from the particular cases brought to light by the police themselves, all that can fairly be said is that there has been gossip.

The Home Secretary himself said in the House of Commons that the relations between police and public had become unsatisfactory. There had been loss of confidence. The Home Secretary also said, after the sudden resignation of General Horwood, the Chief Commissioner, that there was no man in Scotland Yard whom he considered suitable for promotion to the post. This statement was followed by the still more sudden resignation of General Childs, the Assistant Commissioner. Another startling remark of the Home Secretary was that it was only a stern call to duty that made Lord Byng of Vimy return to the public service in the new capacity of policeman.

Disciplinarian

It is quite clear that Lord Byng was not drafted because he is an accomplished sleuth. He was needed to deal rather with the police force than with the criminal classes. For Lord Byng is a great leader of men. He can win confidence and secure co-operation. He is a disciplinarian without being a despot. One of his most marvellous faculties is that of remembering all about people he has met. Soon after his return from Canada he was at the annual reunion dinner of the Canadian Expeditionary Force in London. In his conversation he talked about scores of not very notable people he had met in different parts of Canada. Hardly a name was mentioned that he could not place. I was impressed by his memory of so many newspaper men. This faculty is very valuable in a leader of men. It is no surprise to learn that since Lord Byng became Chief Commissioner he has been paying informal visits to the police stations all over London and having individual talks with officers of all ranks. Every man is made to feel that Lord Byng knows him personally and is interested in what he is doing.

Young Men Chosen

It fell to Lord Byng to appoint an Assistant Commissioner in place of General Childs, and it was doubtless part of his policy of establishing good relations with the force that he did not import any new military man from outside, which has been done on previous occasions, but he promoted a man already at the Yard. It has also been noted that in various appointments that he has made he has departed from the custom of promoting by seniority and he has put young men in very important positions. One of the youngest superintendents in the force was moved only the other day to Vine Street, headquarters of "C" Division, which covers the most important section of the West End. It is the real truth, and no mere convention to say that Lord Byng's personal interest in his men has made him extremely popular, and the London police are already willing to adopt the name of "Byng boys" once held by the Canadian Corps in France.

The campaign against West End illegalities of a certain kind is no secret, even though the only prosecutions yet made are against ex-Sergeant Goddard, Mrs. Kate Meyrick and Luigi Achille Ribuffi. The Home Secretary in Parliament announced in Parliament that Lord Byng was casting a net for promoters of disorderly establishments who have enjoyed immunity by corruption of the police. The promoters in question are largely aliens. Some of them are women, and they are known to have resorted to the most extraordinary expedients to carry on their operations in this country. Some of them have paid British men to marry them so that they could acquire British citizenship and protect themselves from deportation.

Seeking Bribery

The campaign aforesaid has, among other objectives, that of finding cases of bribery of the police. Many people connected with night clubs and such places have been examined, but they have refused to give information. As a result of the public agitation about improper methods of obtaining evidence it has been advertised to everybody that nobody is bound to answer any questions put to them by the police. The result is that the police find themselves very much handicapped in their present inquiries in the West End underworld.

Despite this handicap the present campaign of Scotland Yard has got scores of undesirable aliens on the run. Some have been prompted by deportation orders and others are not waiting for so much persuasion. Owners of illegal night clubs and gambling dens, drug traffickers and blackmailers and share-pushers are being cleaned out. These people have social clubs, restaurants, cafes and apartment houses, outwardly respectable but hiding detestable villainies. They are being made aware that the police know their real character even if the evidence for prosecution is as yet lacking.

The cases of Goddard, Meyrick and Ribuffi have been before the courts and the charges are well known. Ex-Sergeant Goddard was a most trusted officer in a very responsible position and it is alleged that he has taken enormous sums in graft over a period of years. He is a tall, handsome man of splendid physique and in appearance he is the very type of an officer with brains and ambition. Mrs. Meyrick is still more remarkable. She has a large family of sons and daughters well known in fashionable circles. One daughter is married to the Earl of Kinnoul and the other to Lord de Clifford. When Mrs. Meyrick came out of prison a few weeks ago her family made quite a celebration and she received sacks of congratulatory telegrams and loads of flowers from her loving friends. She was soon rearrested on a charge of having corruptly given money to Goddard before she went to prison for selling liquor at an unregistered club. While she was under remand for this charge it is alleged that she has repeaced the offence of selling liquor illicitly. It is alleged that both on Dec. 5 and Dec. 12 was she selling liquor without a license and that on the latter date in the early hours of the morning she had about 300 people at her establishment, including varsity men who had come to London for the Oxford and Cambridge rugger match.

Night Club Queen

Mrs. Meyrick well deserves her title of Night Club Queen. When she is in the police court dock she dominates everybody by her personality. She appears in dresses that only the Parisian genius can create and she is as self-possessed as if she were entertaining in her own drawing room. She exchanges utterly unembarrassed glances with admiring friends and she is always quick to laugh at any jokes that crops up in the proceedings. Even before such a famous magistrate as Sir Chartres Biron she seems to be presiding over the court instead of being a prisoner on trial.

Luigi Achille Ribuffi, charged with paying graft to Goddard, is also a very uncommon kind of man. He is impressive with his thick white hair and his small brown moustache adds further distinction. He looks an artist, a connoisseur, one who has all the accomplishments and qualities for managing the most exclusive and luxurious establishments. As a matter of fact, that is what he has been doing.

But as already said, Lord Byng's attention is not confined to the West End. One of his innovations is the telephone police box. It is planned to have 1,500 of them in the streets of London and throughout the Metropolitan area. The box will be directly connected with the nearest police station so that any citizen or officer can summon the police immediately in case of crime, accident or any other need. The station can also communicate with the nearest policeman for if he is not there to hear the ring the box will show a blue light which will let any passing policeman know he is wanted. This system will be particularly useful for tracking motor thieves.

OFFICIAL ASKS FOR MORE CARE BY RESIDENTS

Says Many Blazes Could be Avoided if Furnaces Watched

Firemen of the city were probably the worst sufferers from the extreme cold of the week end, when no less than eight fires were attended together with one false alarm.

Due to the cold, several of the men in responding to the calls were badly frost-bitten, one of the drivers, Fireman McIntyre, so badly that Chief Dutton ordered him home after responding to a call.

Faces, ears, noses and fingers were badly nipped as the men handled the heavy hose, the water turning to ice and the spray sticking to their clothing and giving them an appearance akin to the trees that were covered with hoar frost.

"The worst of it all is" said Chief Dutton, "that every one of these fires could have been avoided if people had only taken a little care. During a cold spell such as this, they put on heavy fires without making sure that their pipes are in good condition, with the result that the descending temperature causes a contraction and a crack appears in the flue or chimney and a fire breaks out."

Three Halls Respond

Sunday morning at 4 o'clock the firemen answered their first call of the day. The temperature was in the neighborhood of 45 below zero, and engines from halls 1, 2 and 5 responded. By the time the men got to the address, 10733 106th avenue, the building, a two-storey shack, was in flames and totally destroyed. Mr. Robins, the occupant, escaped in his night attire and was outside when the firemen arrived.

At 7:01 a.m. a call was answered to 10516 84th avenue, by Hall 6, where an incipient blaze was checked.

The next call came at 8:04 a.m. to 11147 71st street where a house was on fire. This was extinguished with little loss.

Another call, 11:47, took the brigade to 106th street and 107th avenue, Halls 1, 2 and 5 responding, while at 1:18 p.m. Halls 1, 2 and 8 answered to 95A street and 120th avenue, where a shack was on fire.

At 6:45 a.m. Monday a call was received to the Albany apartments, 125th street and 110th avenue, where a blaze was checked.

Two calls were received Saturday afternoon, neither of them being serious.

CONSIDER PLAN TO LEASE PART OF "PEN" SITE

Wire From Ottawa Says City's Proposal Under Advisement

Proposal of Mayor A. U. G. Bury to lease the north 58 acres of the Pen site for an athletic ground is being considered by the federal department of justice, according to a wire received by the mayor Monday from the Hon. Charles Stewart, Edmonton West M.P., and minister of the interior.

The mayor's proposal was made as an alternative to the offer of the government to sell the city the whole 100 odd acres of the site at a price of about $2,000 per acre. This offer was considered out of the question by the commissioners.

"Well, it looks like they are considering it, anyway," commented Mayor Bury on reading the wire. "We have at least got that far."

At the last meeting of the finance committee it was recommended that a delegation of three be sent to Ottawa to interview the federal government on on the matter, and this recommendation will come before the city council Monday night.

Two Seek Shelter In City's Prison

Notwithstanding the extreme cold of the past few days, requests for a night's accommodation or meals at the police station have been singularly few, according to Chief A. G. Shute.

Sunday, the coldest day in eight years, but two applicants for shelter appeared at the local bastille, and both these were sent to Adjutant Stewart of the Salvation Army, who looked after them for the time being.

Usually a cold spell brings a number of requests for shelter from those who, through force of circumstance, are homeless and hungry, and these, if deserving, are always accommodated at the police station.

Right-of-way For Fire Rigs Asked

Right-of-way for fire department vehicles going to or from fire is sought in a proposed charter amendment which will be discussed by the city council Monday night. S. Gosling city claims agent, has drawn attention to the fact that the present Act only gives to fire department vehicles the right to proceed at such a rate as, under the circumstances and condition of the street, is reasonable. He points out that last year an accident occurred which might have been avoided if the fire department vehicles had had the right-of-way, and accordingly the city was forced to pay heavy damages.

Former Doctor Again Comes Before Court

With McLeod Sinclair, K.C., well-known Calgary lawyer, conducting the defence, the second trial of W. T. Brand, charged with abortion, got under way at the Supreme Court, trial division, Monday morning, before Chief Justice Simmons and jury. The accused pleaded not guilty to the charge.

The accused is alleged to have committed an illegal operation on Mrs. Lele Moorhouse, young married woman, between June 2 and 7, 1928.

Edward B. Cogswell K.C., is conducting the case for the crown.

TYPOS ELECT OFFICERS FOR CURRENT YEAR

Robt. McCreath Re-elected as President—Fred Deer New Vice-President

At a largely attended meeting of the Edmonton Typographical Union No. 604, held in the Labor Hall, Saturday night, January 26, officers were elected for the present year. This year saw no exception to the keen interest which this body always takes in electing its officers, and in returning Robt. McCreath as their head, this union has chosen a man with a wealth of experience, and who is noted for the interest which he shows in printing circles in particular, and the Labor movement in general.

The following are the officers elected: President, Robt. McCreath; vice-president, Fred Deer; secretary-treasurer, D. K. Knott; recording and corresponding secretary, E. Brown; sergeant-at-arms, Reg. Stevens; executive committee, G. R. Deeton, Geo. Campbell, T. R. Cole (with president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, and recording and corresponding secretary); auditors, Reg. Stevens, W. Foulds, Fred Smee.

At the December meeting, Robt. McCreath and D. K. Knott were chosen as delegates to attend the Alberta Federation of Labor convention, held at Lethbridge, January 14, 15, 16, 17. A report will be presented at the February meeting.

Labor Lecturer Is Attraction In City

On Monday evening he will give a lecture on "Impending Wars" at the Memorial Hall, and on Tuesday, at the McKay avenue school, his subject will be "The Future of Labor in World Affairs," while on Wednesday evening at the King Edward school he will take for his subject "What Happens to teachers who think."

Vegreville Finances In Splendid Shape

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

VEGREVILLE, Jan. 28.—About fifty ratepayers braved the extreme cold to attend the annual meeting of ratepayer sof the town and school district held in the town hall Friday.

The annual statement of the town showed a surplus of revenue over expenditure for the year of $1,600, and a sinking fund of something over $90,000 which includes a surplus of some $10,000 over present legal requirements. Over 80 per cent of outstanding taxes were collected during the year, which was said to constitute a record. Reports of chairmen of committees of both council and school board were well received, and both bodies received unanimous votes of thanks for their services during the year.

Mayor Holden, who was prevented from attending by illness, addressed an optimistic letter to the ratepayers voicing the belief that the entry of the C.P.R. to Vegreville and the consequent connection with the north country would build Vegreville up rapidly as an industrial and distributing centre.

FENIAN RAID VETERAN DIES

TORONTO, Jan. 28. — William Henry Clarke, 82, died here yesterday. Mr. Clarke was a veteran of the Fenian raid of 1866. He held the position of chief clerk in the king's printer's department of the civil service for more than 33 years, retiring about 10 years ago because of failing health.

Enactment of the Old Age Pensions scheme which it is proposed to introduce at the forthcoming session of the legislature will mean an increased annual expenditure on the part of the provincial government of about $300,000 a year, declared Premier J. E. Brownlee on Monday in the course of a reply to members of a delegation representing the Alberta Federation of Labor, who had come to make representations to the cabinet as a result of resolutions passed at the organization's last annual meeting held two weeks ago at Lethbridge.

The premier's reply came after a submission had been made that the amendment to the Mother's Allowance Act, passed in 1926, providing for the application of the Act to the wife of a man who is unable to support his wife by reason of total disability, be proclaimed, and the pressing for the adoption of a reciprocal clause contained in the Ontario Act, which provides for the payment to persons coming under the Act who have moved from one province to another.

"Not This Year"

It was pointed out by the premier that as the Old Age Pensions scheme would be introduced, which would cost about $300,000, and that the request regarding the Mother's Allowance Act would cost at least as much more, this expenditure taken from the total provincial revenue of about $12,000,000, the suggestion could hardly be adopted this year.

Request also was made that the Workmen's Compensation Act be so amended as to eliminate the "three day waiting" period.

It was pointed out that this provision nullified the increased compensation for more than 50 per cent. of the workmen, and in the cases of workmen whose injury was of a duration of from 10 to 49 days, there was an actual loss as a result of amendments made to the Act last year. The revision of the Act was undertaken at the request of the Federation of Labor, and it was unfair that some workers should benefit at the expense of others. The total amount involved in the elimination or modification of this clause would not be great, but the loss of compensation was greatly felt by the workmen.

A request for action along the line of state health insurance was met with the reply from Hon. George Hoadley, minister of agriculture and health, that extensive investigations had been made along this line during the last year.

On behalf of motion picture theatre projection machine operators, it was requested that projection rooms be adequately provided with running water and ablution facilities, and that these additions be made in connection with structural changes being made in renovating the theatres for "talkie" purposes.

Would Cut Tax

It was also requested that Alberta follow the lead of British Columbia in reducing the tax now paid by projectionists and suggested that first and second class licenses be issued for $20 and renewed annually on payment of a $2 fee.

More adequate inspection of building operations was requested in connection with a request that amendments to the Building Trades Protection act passed at the last session be proclaimed. Instances were advanced of accidents occurring where alleged slackness in inspection had taken place.

Requests for amendments to the Mines act brought the reply from Premier Brownlee that shortly after the opening of the legislature an announcement would be made in respect to a possible complete revision of the whole Mines act. The Premier has said on previous occasions that he was not entirely satisfied with this statute as it stands, and has been contemplating a revision for some time. The delegation asked that one board be set up for the whole province for the granting of certificates of competency. A digest of the Act for each individual miner on commencing work also was asked.

In reply to a request that mine workers in each district elect a mines inspector, the Premier said that there was a principle involved which might not be reconciled to the views of the cabinet, as the only members of the government service who were elected were the cabinet ministers.

Much discussion took place around the request from the hotel and restaurant employes that a regulation be made under the Health act to compel hotels, restaurants and other eating establishments to use only proper utensils for the cooking and maintenance of food.

At the request of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees the Federation asked for the inclusion under the Act of all restaurants and cafes.

The delegation strongly urged that some means be taken to prohibit the employment of white girls by Orientals. One delegate said that in most cases where girls came in from the country and applied for positions at the white cafes, they were refused on account of inexperience. Then they sought employment with the Orientals. "No matter what their morals are before they go to work in these cafes, they are always 'shot' when they come out," he said. If it was not possible to keep them from working for the orientals, then it was asked that they be released from work at 8 p.m. and the age limit be raised from 15 to 18 years.

[illegible] the other matters referred to were the promotion of the principle of collective bargaining between the government and the Civil Service association; the need for a barbers' license law; the development by the province of power resources; the re-enactment of the Technical Education Act, and the proclaiming of election day as a public holiday.

Fred J. White, M.L.A., Calgary, and leader of the Labor group in the legislature, acted as spokesman, while other officials of the Alberta Federation of Labor in the delegation were [illegible] E. Roper, secretary; A. Farmilo, H. H. McKim, Robert Livett and Fred Smeed, vice-presidents.

Grading of 82nd street from Clover Bar road to 95th avenue, as requested by the Forest Heights Community League, will cost $850, according to a report of Engineer A. W. Haddow, which will be submitted to the city council Monday night. The letter points out that between 50 and 60 sections of land in the district have been filed recently, and this will result in considerable traffic and make the road an absolute necessity.

She'll be one of the comeliest revelers in this year's Greenwich Village revels. Marion Cutler is pictured above, reveling in a dainty little—very little—costume which is a revelation in itself. The revels are an annual whoopee event in New York's Bohemian colony.

One Minute Interviews

FIRE ALARMS SLOW

"Owing to the exceptionally severe weather, the mechanism of city fire alarm boxes is being slowed down, and when not working at the proper speed the correct number does not come in to the central headquarters. The superintendent of fire alarm boxes was on duty all day Sunday putting coal oil on the working parts in an effort to make them function properly, and thus contend with an unusual situation," according to Fire Chief A. Dutton.

PAINT BUSINESS BRISK

Chambers, managing director of the Sherwin Williams Paint Co., who is a visitor in Edmonton and who is registered at the Macdonald hotel. While in the city, Mr. Chambers will be the guest of his brother, Garpet Chambers, at an informal dinner.

CAPITAL COMING WEST

"Conditions in the east are very flourishing, and the general prosperity there will find an outlet to Western Canada in the form of investment, and Alberta is favored considerably in Toronto and Montreal. The opportunities afforded for investment in this province are being closely investigated by financiers of the east, and a steady stream of capital should come west in the near future for development purposes," declared Esten Fletcher, manager of the Bank of Toronto, who has just returned from attending the annual meeting of the Bank of Toronto.

About 80 per cent of this number are foreigners.

There is every likelihood that the dole line will continue until the spring as there are no signs of work opening up for the men.

LABOR LEADER IN EDMONTON

President of Railway Men's Organization Touring the West

"Trade conditions throughout Canada, and especially in railway trades are very good, and the prospects of 1929 were never better," declared A. R. Mosher, of Ottawa, president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes, and president of the All Canadian Congress of Labor, who was an Edmonton visitor on Sunday.

Mr. Mosher is making a tour of the locals throughout Western Canada and on Sunday afternoon addressed a mass meeting of the railway workers in the Alexandra hall. He reported the position of the union, and stated that greater progress had been made by the union than any American union during the last twenty years.

He outlined the advantages to be derived from the national industrial form of organization, and pointed out that the All Canadian Congress insisted on home rule in the labor movement, but at the same time did not lose sight of the world-wide problems confronting labor.

He stated that the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes was the largest organized body in Canada, and through its affiliation with the International Transport Workers are associated with millions of transport workers in all parts of the world with the exception of the United States.

Elroy Robson, general organizer for the movement, also addressed the meeting.

Mr. Mosher and Mr. Robson left on Monday morning for Bigar, Saskatchewan.

Want Council to State Stand on Arbitration Demand by Province

A definite decision of the city council on the request of the provincial government that the city submit the claim of the provincial telephone system for a connecting fee from the municipal system to a board of arbitration is being pressed by the premier and Hon. W. Vernor Smith, minister of telephones and railways, and the matter is again scheduled to come before the city council Monday night.

Some time ago the government's claim was presented by R. B. Baxter, former deputy minister of telephones and manager of the provincial telephone system, and after considerable discussion the matter was laid on the table. The question is still before the finance committee.

Asks Decision

The government now requests that a definite decision be given before the opening of the session on January 31 in order that a course of action may be determined.

The government's claim is based on service allegedly given by the provincial system to the municipal system. In reply to a question of the city council, the government has agreed to two principles, that they are not relying on the character of the provincial system as a Crown undertaking or upon any Crown prerogative and secondly that the claim is based entirely on the volume of service supplied by each of the two systems to the other.

Retail Clerks Will Appear At Meeting

A charter amendment providing for a Wednesday half-holiday during all months of the year except December will be sought by the Edmonton Retail Clerks' Association at a meeting of the city council Monday night. The petition points out that the Wednesday half-holiday is only effective during the four summer months at present.

The retail clerks also ask that the stores be kept open until 10 p.m. for only three nights before Christmas, and be closed on Christmas Eve. Considerable agitation for these changes has been evident in retail clerks' circles for some time and a strenuous fight for the reforms will be made, it is expected.

Taxi Driver Fells Woman Saturday

Ten automobile accidents were reported to city police over the week-end, only one of them being at all serious.

James Rickie, taxi driver, reported that Saturday at 10:30 p.m., he was driving south on 101st street and, when turning east into 101A avenue, noticed a woman in front of his car. He applied his brakes, but the car skidded, knocking down Mrs. James Satterfield, 5 Alberta Loan block. He picked her up and took her to her rooms, calling Dr. Baker, who examined the woman and found her not seriously injured. Her arms and legs were bruised and one eye closed up.

The other mishaps were mainly caused by collisions of cars due to the state of the streets.

Following his recent purchases of property in the city comes the announcement from W. A. Trudeau on Monday morning that he has optioned two parcels of property in the business section of the city, the options taken covering a purchase price of $100,000. Police have been working on the theory that she had first been attacked and then thrown down the well.

FAMOUS BAND ENGAGED FOR SUMMER FAIR

Princess Pat's, Canadian Army Aggregation, to Perform Here

The band of that famous Canadian regiment, the Princess Pats, will be one of the feature attractions at the summer fair, according to J. M. Douglas, director of the Exhibition Association, who has just returned from the annual meeting of the Western Canada Fairs Association held in Winnipeg last week. Mr. Douglas states that the band is one of the best on the North American continent, and quite on a par with any that has been brought from the Old Country.

Competition for the midway concessions is very keen this year, according to Mr. Douglas, and showmen are offering an entirely new set of shows for the approval of the directors. The contract was again let to the Johnny J. Jones shows, which outfit has completely revised their stands since last year, and will travel the circuit with a 50-car show. Bert Earls was again successful in obtaining the concession for the wheels, while the grand stand concession was let to Barnes and Carruthers. It is not possible to get information on this matter until the return of Manager P. W. Abbott during the week.

The question of the subject matter of the pageant has been left over for a short time, the Rogers Company being requested to submit further ideas to the directors for the next meeting of the association.

Want Cash Grant for Development of Edmonton Air Port

Urging that the federal government make a grant towards the lighting of municipal airdromes, as four federal departments will benefit from such an undertaking, Mayor A. U. G. Bury sent a letter to the Hon. Charles Stewart, M.P. for Edmonton West, and minister of the interior, asking him to take the matter up. In this request Mayor Bury has the co-operation of Mayor F. E. Osborne, of Calgary.

In his letter Mayor Bury pointed out that the planes of the forestry department, post office, department of the interior and department of militia and defence will benefit by improvements carried out to municipal airfields, and should accordingly contribute to the cost.

The post office will benefit by the lighting of the fields through this improvement facilitating night flying of mail planes, the mayor points out, while improvements to the field will also assist the planes of the department of the interior in its work of developing the northwest.

COLDEST DAY FOR 7 YEARS IS RECORDED

Mercury Sinks to 49 Below —Was 40 Below Monday Morning

With an official temperature of 49 degrees below zero registered at the local office of the Dominion Meteorological bureau between 8 and 9 o'clock Sunday morning, Edmonton experienced the coldest weather in seven years, and the third lowest local reading in 18 years. The city was the coldest spot in the entire Dominion of Canada on Sunday.

The city today enters upon its eighth straight day of below zero temperatures, the thermometer failing to go above that mark since Sunday, January 20.

Falling steadily throughout Saturday night the thermometer touched the 49 below mark and then rallied slightly to register a maximum of 32 below between 2 and 3 o'clock in the afternoon. It sank again and at 8:30 a.m. Monday it was at 40 below with every indication that the severe cold would continue.

Lowest Since 1922

The Sunday morning reading was the lowest since January 22, 1922, when the thermometer sank to 50 below. The lowest reading prior to that time was 52 below, registered on the morning of January 13, 1911. Sunday morning's temperature was thus the third lowest since January 11, 1913.

The humidity which was in the region of 84 for six days, dropped to 64 Sunday but a heavy ground mist which hid objects more than a few feet away came up during Saturday night and had not entirely disappeared when the sun sank Sunday afternoon.

In the north, Pouce Coupe and Beaver Lodge record the lowest temperatures with 45 below. Grouard was next in line with 39 below.

Calgary registered 28 below, 21 degrees warmer than Edmonton, while in Saskatchewan severe drops on the mercury were recorded. Prince Albert had 40 below while Battleford trailed along with 38 and Swift Current had 32.

Winnipeg had 24 below while Port Arthur reported 16 below.

Worse Than Dawson

Even the far north points failed to reach Edmonton's low figure. Dawson City was nearest with 43 below while Aklavik, far up on the shores of the Arctic ocean, had only 14 below.

Today hundreds of Edmontonians are suffering from frozen noses, cheeks and limbs, the frigid temperatures tending to freeze exposed parts of the body within a few minutes. No one was seriously frozen but home-style treatments are being used to aid unfortunate toes and fingers.

Freaks of the cold weather are many. One report has it that a taxi with the regulation heavy cover for the hood over the motor, froze up during actual operation and the radiator burst before the operator could get another machine out to have his stalled auto taken back.

Street cars operated with some difficulty, the slippery condition of the rails caused by the severe cold causing some trouble. Stops were made at most corners by using reverse power instead of the ordinary air-brakes.

Three locomotives were required at times to move heavy trains at local railway yards, the rails offering insufficint traction for one engine.

City Traveller Is Honored By Friends

S. G. "Gren" Caldwell, who has been promoted western manager of the Todhunter, Mitchell Company for the three prairie provinces, was the guest of honor at a banquet at the Royal George Hotel on Saturday evening, tendered him by his fellow "Knights of the Grip," previous to his leaving for Winnipeg to take over his new duties. J. E. Rymer, past councillor of the Edmonton council No. 447 was chairman.

Over 100 travellers and prominent business men assembled for the occasion, and W. McLennan, also a past councillor, presented Mr. Caldwell with a club bag in token of the esteem in which he is held in Edmonton.

During his 16 years residence in this city Mr. Caldwell has held every office in the local council of the U.C.T., and has also been delegate to the Northwest Commercial Travellers' Association.

At the conclusion of the banquet a smoker was held at which songs and speeches featured the program. Mayor Bury, Police Chief Shute, Ald. Hazlett, Neil Brown and George Scott addressed the gathering.

Says School Board Wouldn't Pay Wages

Alleging that the Board of Trustees of the Looma school district, No. 4321 had failed to pay him the contract price for the erection of a school and also to have withheld a deposit cheque of $100, Joseph P. Levasseur of Edmonton filed a statement of claim at the Supreme Court offices Monday morning against the trustees, asking for $2100.

The plaintiff alleges that by an agreement in writing made on August 10, 1928, he agreed to erect the school for $2000 and deposited a cheque for $100 with the trustees. He claims that the board did not pay him the money and also kept the cheque.

The board, in its statement of defence, claims that the plaintiff failed to live up to specifications in the erection of the school.

J. W. Francis, S.S.B. Official, Passes Away

Word reached Edmonton this morning of the death of J. W. Francis, superviser of the Soldier Settlement Board at St. Paul des Metis, and former member of the 49th battalion, who was well known in the city.

The death of Mr. Francis followed an operation a few days ago, and the body is being brought to the city on Tuesday. Funeral services will be announced later.

Mrs. Francis, who was formerly Miss I. O. Srigley, a former Edmonton school board employee, is also well known in the city.

A. R. Fortin, travelling representative of the General Motors, Chevrolet branch, Winnipeg, is in the city on business.

'Enclosed Please Find Check'

Four of the sweetest words in the English language. If you have a desire to experience the joy they bring, just dig up something you don't need and sell it. Old furniture piled in the basement (it'll bring real money and leave more space in the storeroom). That old camera, or bicycle—they all can be turned into cash with a well worded W. Ad.

Camrose Had Year Of Progress In 1928

Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin

CAMROSE, Jan. 23. At a meeting of the ratepayers of Camrose, James K. Burgess was elected as chairman of the meeting. He called upon the members of the Council for their reports covering the various departments of the town's municipal affairs for the year 1928. The report of the fire department showed that for the past two years there had been no fire loss in the town. In the Public Works department it was shown that the addition of a caterpillar tractor to the equipment had been a good investment and minimized the cost of street maintenance and other work where a tractor could be used to advantage. In the Health and Relief department there had been but few cases of contagious diseases and the expenditure for poor relief had been less than in the previous year. It had been necessary to open the Isolation hospital for a few days in the year for an occasional case of scarlet fever and there had been a few cases on measles. Early in the year there was one case of mild type of infantile paralysis.

The chairman of the Power House committee, as distinct from the committee having charge of the distribution of light and power, intimated that the demand upon the power plant for electric current had been twenty-three per cent. in excess of that demanded in 1927. The increase in electric current used in the past year was a concrete evidence of the substantial progress being made by the town at large.

The report of the electric light and power committee supplemented the report of the power house committee and showed that this utility had been operated at a profit of over $7,500 for the town for the year 1928. It was pointed out that the town utilities had always assumed full payment of all debenture redemption chargeable against them.

The report of the water and sewers committee dealt mainly with the efforts made to augment the supply of water for the town. Mayor John Douglas presented the financial statement which showed the town's financial condition to be excellent. He pointed out that in 1928, for the first time in the history of the municipality, there had not been a note placed with the bank for advances pending the receipt of tax collection. This meant that instead of paying any interest charges the town had reversed the condition and had actually earned interest on its funds placed in a savings account.

Magna Charta Cited By British Woman In Seeking Justice

Former Head of Women's Royal Air Force Makes Stirring Plea to Have Old Case Re-opened by Authorities

BY HENRY SOMERVILLE
Special Despatch to the Edmonton Bulletin (Copyright)

LONDON, Jan. 10—(By Mail)—"To none will we sell, to none deny or delay, right or justice." This, the fortieth article of Magna Charta, in the original Latin, heads the petition which is being presented to the House of Lords for a re-hearing of the case of the Hon. Violet Douglas-Pennant, who was summarily dismissed from the post of commandant of the Women's Royal Air force in 1918.

This has been called "the English Dreyfus case," and without expressing any opinion about its merits, or even its importance, there can only be admiration for the persistence of the group of people who have devoted money and time unstintingly for no other motive than a desire to vindicate a woman whom they believe to have been wronged. They do indeed claim that something larger than the rights of an individual are at stake and that the honor and integrity of the civil service are involved, but the personal appeal seems strongest. All during the summer meetings in favor of Miss Douglas-Pennant were held in Hyde Park and her champions are not cranks, but are men and women of distinction. A hardened journalist is apt to look for financial or political axes to grind when he meets organized propagandists, but there is no sign of ulterior motives behind the present agitation.

May Affect Votes

There is, however, gossip that the case may play a part in the coming general election campaign. In the ten years that the case has been on the carpet many things have happened. One of them was an inquiry by Mr. Cecil Harmsworth, M.P., ordered by the then prime minister, Mr. Lloyd George. Mr. Harmsworth's report has never been published though Miss Douglas-Pennant and her friendshave never ceased demanding it. There are whispers thata certain newspaper has got hold of the report and will reproduce it for a political puruose. All the prime ministers since Mr. Lloyd George was in office have followed the policy of suppression so it is not obvious that publication can help or hurt any one of the party leaders in particular. The suggestion is made, though it is not entirely convincing, that publication will hit Mr. Baldwin and thus score points for the Labor and Liberal parties. It is claimed for Mr. Lloyd George that he was originally in favor of publication, but was persuaded against it by Lord Weir, who had been air minister. The case came before Mr. Ramsay MacDonald when he was prime minister. It came again before Mr. Baldwin in his present term of office. Mr. Baldwin excused himself from being troubled with it by saying that his predecessors, including Mr. MacDonald, had dealt with it, and that Miss Douglas-Pennant had informed Mr. MacDonald that she was satisfied to let the whole matter rest. Miss Douglas-Pennant denied that she had ever given such an intimation to anybody. Her friends formed a deputation which interviewed Mr. MacDonald with the result that Mr MacDonald had to correct Mr. Baldwin and to ask that his—Mr. MacDonald's—name should not be used against Miss Douglas-Pennant. There is whisper that a well known man in a responsible position culpably misled both Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Baldwin. If this be true, and the facts are made known, the scandal will be sensational.

Ancient History

The case itself is ancient history. Miss Douglas-Pennant had been for twenty years in the Civil Service and had had a distinguished career when she was appointed Commandant of the Women's Royal Air Force in April 1918. During her term of office she says that she encountered intrigue and obstruction from the very first day. In August she was dismissed.

Two of her subordinates, Miss Andrew and Mrs. Beatty, worked openly against her. They went to three influential women, Lady Rhondda, Miss Philippa Stracheq and Dame Katherine Furse and persuated them to urge Miss Douglas-Pennant's dismissal. The late Mr. Tyson Wilson, Chief Whip of the Labor Party, was also approached and he revealed that he had been told that Miss Douglas-Pennant was a violent and disreputable woman under whom no decent women could serve. Certainly the stories accepted by Lady Rhondda and carried by her to Lord Weir musth have been pretty terrible for Lord Weir caused Miss Douglas-Pennant to be dismissed forthwith. The accusations conveyed by Lady Rhondda have never been made known and it was long after the case against her was closed that Miss Douglas-Pennant learned of the activities of Lady Rhondda.

After the war, Miss Douglas-Pennant's friends got the case re-opened to the extent of an inquiry by a select committee of the House of Lords. This tribunal decided against her, but it is alleged that the tribunal was unfair, that the chairman, Lord Wrenbury, wrongly threw on Miss Douglas-Pennant the onus of proving that she was wrongfully dismissed and that the findings of the committee were in direct opposition to the evidence.

The strong point that Miss Douglas-Pennant's friends continually make is that she was dismissed as a result of secret accusations, the nature of which have never been made known to her, though they have been referred to in terms which prove them to have been very grave. There was a letter of the Air Ministry containing these charges, and also a copy of the letter, but when Miss Douglas-Pennant's counsel called for the letter and the copy the Air Ministry said both had been lost.

Her friends say that Miss Douglas-Pennant was broken because she refused to countenance irregularities in the Civil Service and that her case shows that cabinet ministers can be influenced behind the scenes in order to bring about the dismissal of senior officers without even the head of the department being consulted.

The inquiry by the House of Lords Select Committee was side-stepped into allegations about evil conditions in women's camps during the war. Whether there will be a new inquiry remains to be seen, but it does not seem likely that it will be ordered by any except a Labor government, unless a Conservative government's hands are forced by the publication of the Harmsworth Report.

Empress Hotel Will Be Enlarged

This is how the old "Empress Hotel" will appear when the midsummer tourist traffic to Victoria, British Columbia, is at its height, and the two and a half million dollar extension to the left is completed.

The new addition, which has just been announced by E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, will consist of an entirely new wing, following the Chateau type of architecture, exemplified is the old portion, with a 200 foot frontage to the water and a 220 foot frontage on Humboldt street. This extension will add 278 rooms with bath, bringing the total accommodation up to 560 rooms. This work, which is to be started immediately, will be partly, if not wholly in service during next summer. The main portion of the extension will comprise seven full floors and basement, and an additional floor in the high pitched corner roof. The north-west corner, which will contain four de luxe rooms en suite, will be carried up to a low tower of nine full floors and one dormer floor. The sample rooms on the ground floor will be twice the size of the ordinary bedrooms, and contain bed closets and all modern appointments. The installation of two more passenger and two additional service elevators, together with the electrification of the present elevator system will give adequate and quick service.

Plans for the remodelling of the present building include an addition to the ball-room and a new conservatory, besides a number of alterations to the main floor and basement which will add to the comfort and convenience of the patrons. Service will be improved by alterations to the laundry and boiler house, and an addition to the kitchen. Steel for the new work has already been ordered from the Dominion Bridge company, and the steel structure, it is planned, will be completed before the end of April.

Reveals Tragedy

The will of the late Theodore Roberts revealed the other day a bitterness between Roberts and his family that endured from the late actor's youth to his old age. Roberts' mother had wished him to enter the ministry and his father wanted him to learn a profession. Roberts chose the stage and remained an exile from his people all his life. The actor left his estate of $10,000 to Edward Roberts Higgins, above, of whom he was fond. Higgins formerly was an Nea Service artist at New York.

MONSTER NEW ENGINES BUILT

C.P.R. to be Equipped with New Iron Horses This Summer

MONTREAL, Jan. 28—Delivery of the order of giant locomotives intended for service on the lines of the C.P.R. through the west is expected to start early this summer, it was learned today at the company's headquarters at the Windsor station. By the end of the season the oil burning engines just ordered from the Montreal locomotive works should be in operation it is predicted and considerable motive power equipment should be released for service elsewhere throughout the country.

The largest ever constructed or operated in the British Empire, these monster locomotives will be able to do the work of two or more of the lighter machines and will speed freight and passenger trains throughout the mountains in British Columbia. They mark an epoch in the transportation history of the country and will probably revolutionize freight and passenger traffic in the west.

Technically known as the "2-10-4" type—that is, two wheels on the leading truck, ten 63 inch drivers, and four wheels on the trailing truck—the great engines dwarf Stephenson's historic "Rocket" being 78 times heavier, 85 times more powerful, and 45 times as costly. Each engine and tender measures overall 97 feet in length and weigh together 725,000 pounds.

They will have a tractive effort of over 78,000 pounds and will be capable of developing over 4200 horse power. The cylinders are 25 inches in diameter and the stroke 32 inches.

Walter Boyd Heads Waskatenau Board

Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin

WASKATENAU, Jan. 28. — Fred Hanson has returned from Iowa, where he was called owing to the illness of his father.

A box social and dance will be held in the Riverland school on the evening of February 1.

Residents of this district are very pleased that the honor and responsibility of guiding the destinies of the U. F. W. A., provincial body, have been conferred upon one of their members, Mrs. A. H. Warr.

The following were elected as officers of the Waskatenau board of trade for 1929, at the annual meeting held last week: President, Walter Boyd vice-president, George Woodward; secretary-treasurer, Lorne S. Moran and Mr. Wray; corresponding secretary, the Reverend M. Newton. There were ten new members since the annual meeting in 1928.

The recent continued cold snap has enhanced the value of the lending libraries and the radio. The majority of the homes in this district have either the one or the other in use and are making the most of their seasonal leisure.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

ASHTORETH ASHE, honeymooning in Paris, meets an old sweetheart, MONTY ENGLISH. Monty is young and handsome, but Ashtoreth turned him down because he was only a radio salesman, and poor as poverty.

She married, instead, a millionaire named HOLLIS HART, who showers her with gifts and loves her with all his heart. Ashtoreth loves him, too—or she thinks she does. Anyway, Hollis is fabulously good to her. They live at the Ritz, and she has a lady's maid, and a Hispano-Suiza, with a chauffeur named Felix, who wears a bottle-green uniform. And she wears the most beautiful clothes of any American girl in Paris (which is saying a great deal).

Now she is sitting with Monty at a little sidewalk cafe near the Flower Market, watching the French sweethearts make love to each other.

Monty tells Ashtoreth how he has come to Paris, to sell radios. Suddenly he leans to her across the table.

"Tell me, Ash," he asks, "are you happy, dear?"

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLIII

Ashtoreth toyed with a strawberry tart.

"Happy?" she repeated. "Why, Monty, darling, of course I'm happy."

But her voice was a little, scared whisper, that any man could guess was lying.

They sat in silence, like lovers who had quarreled. Near them, a student from the Latin quarter drank chocolate with his sweetheart. They leaned across the table, and exchanged kisses. Down the street came a man and girl, with their arms about each other. She said something thet made him laugh, and he stopped to brush her lips with his. A bus stopped on the corner, and the first man to descend held his arms up to a girl in a red tam She flung herself into his arms, and he kissed her as he set her on her feet. Ashtoreth and Monty looked at each other and smiled.

"Don't you adore the French lovers!" she exclaimed "At home now, there are policewomen on the Common, to arrest boys and girls for kissing. And over here they don't think anything of it at all. There are three couples we've seen kissing within three minutes."

Monty bent to his pastry.

"It's all in the national viewpoint, I suppose. Being human, like the rest of those birds, I'd like a kiss myself. But, being American, I eat a foolish cake instead."

"Why, the idea, Monty! You mustn't forget that I'm a married woman."

"I'm not liable to," he told her. "That's the devil of it."

She leaned toward him, and the fragrance of her violets was a little breath of springtime. She put her fingers on his, gently.

"I'd have made a rotten wife for you, Monty."

"I know that."

"Then what makes you feel so badly?"

"Love's an unreasonable thing," he told her, and dug in his pocket for change. "Come on, let's get moving, Ash."

"How do you mean—unreasonable, Monty?"

"Oh, it makes savages stick rings through their noses, and smiled at her indulgently. "And it makes saps out of wise guys. And little girls ask questions It's a snare and a delusion, that's what it is."

"Where are you living?" she asked. ?"Pension," he told her. "Over on the Left Bank You're at the Ritz I saw it in the papers."

"Yes," she said. "We've a suite that's bigger than the flat. And I've a maid of my own."

"Holy cow!" He whistled softly. "And you like it, Ash?"

"I told you," she reminded him, that I am very happy."

"Your husband," he remarked, when they had walked in silence to the Quai, "seemed like a regular chap, Ash. I suppose he told you all the details about the smash, and the paper I had in my pocket. That was how we knew each other. Lord, what a coincidence!"

"Yes, wasn't it?"

"I didn't tell him I was going to ask you to marry me. I didn't want him to be magnanimous and all that sort of rot."

"What did you tell him, Monty?"

"Well, you saw the story, didn't you? I told him you were a friend of mine, and naturally a thing like that made me hot. He knew I was on my way to see you. He was very decent about it, too. Asked me to drive up with him. There wasn't any point to that, though. Your mind was made up then. He said you were going to be married in the morning. Well, that settled things for me. I wasn't going butting in

"First, when he was telephoning to you, I thought I'd like to talk to you But, when he handed me the phone, and I heard your voice on the other end . . ."

"I know," interrupted Ashtoreth "You asked for mother."

"And I couldn't even talk to her," he admitted. "Just a regular darn fool, tnat's all."

"How are things going, Monty? Do you like it over here?"

"Oh, sure. It's all right Lots of fun, where I'm living. All French people, you know. Gives you a chance to pick up the language"

"It's very nice at the Ritz," she boasted

"All right, if you like it," he agreed "I should think you'd smother in all that grandeur. Me for the little old Left Bank."

"We've a car," she told him grandly "A Hispano-Suiza."

"You can't make me sore," he boasted. "I've a Citroen—one of those French flivvers—myself. And I know my way around, too"

She thought of their chauffeur Felix. Grand in bottle green livery He had a little waxed moustache, and his finger nails were beautifully manicured. There was something about him that made Ashtoreth feel like a little country girl. She didn't know what it was. But Felix and Mabel Mogg—they both made her feel that way

"I bet," Monty was telling her impudently, "that you'd get a lot of kick out of tearing round with me."

Well, maybe she would. Hollis wasn't what anybody'd call a tearing model. Still, she certainly wasn't going to sound disloyal.

"I'm having a perfectly wonderful time," she declared, and pursed her red lips primly.

"Is money all it's cracked up to be?" he asked. "You remember, Ash, I always said you'd marry for love or money."

"Well, I did, didn't I?" she demanded.

"Which?" he inquired insolently

"Love, idiot," she told him sharply

Hollis had reached the hotel before she returned, and called to her from his room, as she opened the door

"Oh, Orchid—is that you? Hello, darling. Did you have a good time?"

She tossed her coat across a Louis XIV chair, teetering on its skinny gold legs.

"Fine. I'll be right in, dear."

She wanted to see herself as Monty had seen her. Before she powdered her nose, or poked her short ends up. To look upon herself through his eyes and guess what he had thought

She crossed the room, to the long mirror on the further wall, and inspected herself critically. Well Monty wouldn't think she had changed for the worse, that was sure.

Hollis was wearing a brocaded dressing gown with silk frogs all over the front of it. They were always catching in Ashtoreth's hair when he held her against him. She kissed him lightly, avoiding his arms.

"Miss me, Holly? You'd never guess who I bumped into dear"

"Anybody I know?"

"Well, sort of. Guess."

He laughed. Sadie Morton, with a sugar daddy?

"No. Oh, you'd never know . . Monty English, dear!"

Ashtoreth, forgetting the [illegible] the moment, wound her arms about her husband's neck . . "And I [illegible] thinking, dear—wouldn't it be nice to ask him to have dinner with us some night?"

Hollis agreed good naturedly.

"Why, fine. Anything you'd like Orchid. Why didn't you bring him back with you?"

"Oh, he had an appointment tonight. He's selling radios, Holly. And you'd never believe it, but he says business is just wonderful. He says American salesmen are the only ones that have any punch. Imagine coming all the way from Boston to sell radios to Frenchmen!"

"Where did you see him, Orchid?"

"Oh, it was just the funniest thing You know you've never taken me to Saint Chapelle, and I've been just dying to see it . . ."

Hollis suppressed a small smile . . . "But you said you hated going to churches, dear"

"Oh, I know. But you might have known that I'd loved to have gone with you, if you'd ever once asked me Anyhow, I thought I'd go this afternoon, all by myself So I was walking through the flower market when all of a sudden—oh, no, I wasn't,—I went to that cafe on the corner. And I'd just barely sat down, when who should come along but Monty! My goodness, Holly, I thought I was seeing things!

"It seems he doesn't know a soul, and he's terribly lonely. He's living over on the Left Bank, and nobody speaks any English, and Monty doesn't know much French yet. And I could just tell he was so desolate. So I thought it would be awfully nice, dear, if you didn't mind, to have him up for dinner some time."

"Any time you say, Orchid."

She let him hold her then. And when her hair caught in the frogs on his dressing gown, she laughed. And put her head back, for him to kiss her lips.

"Love me?" she whispered.

"Love you!" he cried. "Oh, Orchid . . . Orchid!"

And later, when he had carried her to the little brocaded love seat, all fat and puffy, and covered with pink roses, he held her in his arms, and asked her softly.

"Tell me, Orchid—truly, dear,—are you happy?"

She buried her head against his shoulder.

"Why, Holly, what a question!"

But her voice was so muffled, he could not hear. And he lifted her chin with his finger tip

"Are you as happy, Sweetheart, as you dreamed of being? You're not disappointed? Everything beautiful?"

"Beautiful!" she whispered.

"And this Monty-boy didn't make you sorry about anything?"

"Why, Holly, how could he, dear?"

She snuggled closer against his chest.

"I bought some linens for mother today. Those colored damasks. She'll be so pleased."

"Always thinking of someone else!" he murmured tenderly.

He kissed the back of her neck, where her straight hair curled in surprising little twists, like the tendrils on sweet pea

"Oh, my goodness, Holly! Now I'm all caught on those old frogs again."

"I'm sorry, dear."

He separated frogs and hair gently The enchanted moment had passed

"Let's have a cocktail!" Ashtoreth shook out her skirts. "Tell them good strong ones, Holly."

Ashtoreth had learned to drink cocktails in Paris. Somehow they helped her to forget all about Hollis' two front teeth on their little swivels . . . She didn't even mind when he kept saying "Orchid . . . Orchid . . ." as if it was his prayer. And telling her, over and over again how wonderful she was.

Oh, it was very nice, of course, to have a man so absolutely insane about you. But . . . well, a few cocktails did help. There was no getting around that. Because, naturally, a girl had to be pretty sweet to a man who was always giving her things.

There were times when she had a wretched feeling of paying for pearls and amethysts with her kisses and her arms. There were in fact times when she thought of that letter her father had written to her. She wondered if Hollis ever thought of it himself . . . That part about girls who trusted exclusively to their youthful charms being no better than courtesans . . . Only wiser and less honest.

The Play

Played at No Trump with South the Declarer West would open his five of Spades, South winning with the King. The Heart finesse is then taken, East winning with the King and leading a Spade. Winning with the Ace, North then takes four Heart and four Club tricks which, with his two tricks in Spades, gives him four odd at No Trump. Score at Contract, 140 points; at Auction, 40 trick points, 30 for honors.

Played at Hearts by North, if East opens with a Diamond (the only unbid suit) the Ace of Diamonds and the King of trumps must make and Declarer is limited to five-odd

But if East, avoiding a lead from his Minor tenace elects to open with a Club, Declarer can make a Small Slam, as follows:

Taking three rounds of Clubs Declarer discards his singleton Diamond on the third round. Then he leads the King of Spades from Dummy followed by a Diamond, which Declarer ruffs. Declarer makes the Ace of Spades and then leads a low one

East, noting the cross-ruff, should here jump up with his King of trumps and lead a low trump. Declarer winning with the Queen and leading another Spade, which Dummy ruffs

Dummy then leads the Jack of Hearts, removing the last adverse trump and Declarer's remaining Spade is discarded ona Dummy's Ace of Clubs

Declarer therefore makes a Small Slam

Score at Contract: Four Hearts contracted for, 120 in contract score; two extra tricks. 100 in honor score

Score at Auction: Six Hearts, 48; 40 for honors and 50 for Small Slam

Edmonton's Annual Poultry Show Opens In City Market Building Today

EGG COUNTING CONTEST WILL PROVE UNIQUE

To Be Feature of Annual Poultry Show Opening Today

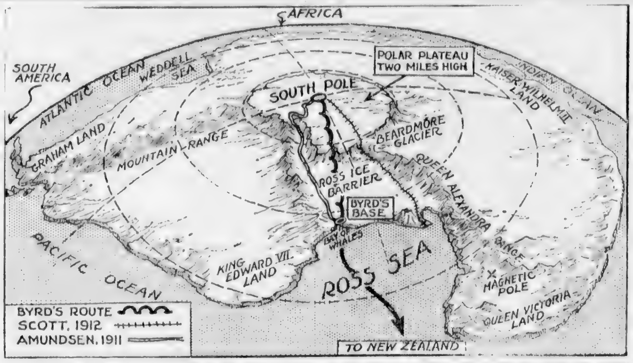
A rather unique egg-counting contest is being held in conjunction with the Poultry Show. A large container faced with plate glass, and backed with wood, has been constructed. This is several feet in width and height but is not the depth of two eggs so that the whole of many of the eggs and a good part of the rest will be visible from the front of the case. Each egg will either be in sight entirely, or a good portion of it will be plainly visible. The trick is to count the eggs. The container will be in plain view, but so placed that no one will be able to get very close to it. The ones making the first correct, or first nearest correct count, and depositing same in the proper container using the coupon provided for the purpose, will have choice of a number of very attractive prizes. The prizes are now on view in the windows of the Jasper avenue offices of the Canadian National Railway, and the container with the eggs may be seen at the Poultry Show.

No one knows how many eggs the container holds, and as the case has been filled by a number of people, each working independently of the others no one has had an opportunity to even estimate how many eggs are in the case. At the conclusion of the Show the eggs will be counted by a committee, and the awards announced through the press.

Bendick Ornamental Birds To Be Shown

One of the most attractive features of the Edmonton Poultry show will be the fine display of ornamental birds which will be brought up by D. B. Bendick, of Leduc. Mr. Bendick is famous in Northern Alberta for his beautiful bird sanctuary at Leduc, and Edmonton is fortunate indeed in having an exhibit of this nature at the show. Gorgeous peacocks and pheasants of many varieties; many kinds of geese, ducks, swan and other ornamental birds. The Western Steel Products have been very kind in loaning large water tanks, in which the water fowl will be exhibited.

With Byrd At the Bottom Of the World



This map shows the scene of one of the greatest adventures of an adventurous age, Commander Richard E. Byrd's conquest of the South Pole area by airplane. Byrd has established his base at the Bay of Whales, 800 miles from the pole, and plans emergency landing stations at 100-mile intervals. He will have to fly above the great polar plateau, a circular mass of ice nearly two miles high. He also plans to explore much of the surrounding Antarctic continent, desolate wastes of mountainous ice that are swept by terrific blizzards. The routes of Amundsen and Scott, who reached the pole by dogsled, are shown. Capt. Wilkins, rival polar explorer, has established his airplane base on an island in Weddell Sea (upper left) and plans to fly to the pole from that direction.

Famous Judges Will Appear In Edmonton

Exhibitors at the Edmonton Poultry show this year are particularly fortunate in having such well known and able judges place the awards on their birds as Geo. Woods, Winnipeg, Man., one of the best poultry judges on the continent; J. H. Warrington, of Cornwall, Ont., and Jos. Shackleton, of Vancouver, B.C., will officiate. Mr. Shackleton is well known to Edmonton and district exhibitors, being a former resident and exhibitor here himself, and a most able judge for a number of years. The judges are always willing and anxious to help the exhibitors discern the good and bad points in their birds, and this is certainly a real educational feature of the show.

Turkey Breeders To Elect New Officers At Annual Meeting

A meeting of the Edmonton Bronze Turkey Breeders' association will be held at 407 Blowey-Henry building Wednesday, January 30, at 3 p.m. With the poultry show being held in Edmonton this week it is anticipated that a large number of turkey breeders and officials of the association will attend.

R. S. Johnson, of Ranler, Alta., is president of the association, while W. C. Lyle, Arrowwood, Alta., is secretary, and both are expected to attend.

The association during 1928 had 2,300 pure-bred breeding birds officially inspected, approved and banded by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. These excellent breeding birds will be sold largely in Alberta, although quite a number are being shipped to every province in the dominion, while some are being sent to the United States.

Recently at the Provincial Poultry show at Calgary, at which 150 turkeys were on display, all prizes except one in the bronze classes were won by members of the association.

The association came into existence two years ago with 60 members, while today it has 146.

Value Of Poultry Up Two Millions

Poultry on Alberta farms during 1928 was valued at $6,095,298 against $4,921,000 in 1927, according to the annual report made by J. H. Hare, poultry commissioner to Hon. George Hoadley, minister of agriculture and health.

In conjunction with the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the provincial department of agriculture compiled the following figures regarding various kinds of poultry on Alberta farms in 1928: Turkeys 1,398,214; geese 200,922; ducks 99,258; other fowl 5,496,130 or a total of 6,213,706 as compared with a total of 5,853,00 in 1927.

R.O.P. Association To Meet Thursday

The annual meeting of the Alberta Record-of-Performance Poultry Breeders' association will be held at 407 Blowey-Henry building on Thursday, January 31, at 2 p.m. The election of officers for the year will be made.

The president of the association is Dr. D. B. Macnab of Calgary, while G. M. Cormie of Edmonton is the secretary.

A large attendance is expected.

MILLING VALUE PRAIRIE WHEAT UNDER REVIEW

Dominion Experts Are Working Night and Day on Tests

Canadian Press

WINNIPEG, Jan. 28.—To meet in so far as they possibly can the demand of the Canadian people for information and advice on the baking, milling and protein qualities of Canadian wheat that is expected to crystallize before the agricultural committee of the house of commons at the coming session, scientists of the department of agriculture are working in double shifts day and night.

L. H. Newman, dominion cerealist, when interviewed here Sunday on his arrival to attend agricultural meetings in the city this week, stated that a great deal of data and information was being obtained and intimated that their conclusions would no doubt be of considerable value in the discussions of grain grading, etc. What they were likely to be, he said, he could not suggest at this stage, the mass of detail having not yet been fully analyzed and correlated.

What is being done has mainly to do with Marquis, Garnet and Reward wheat grown in the prairie provinces. Efforts are being made to ascertain the best varieties to be grown in the various sections of the western provinces.

Mr. Newman said very satisfactory confirmation has been given predictions made earlier that Reward is an exceptional quality wheat. Some time in February he was expecting a conference would be held in Ottawa with the millers and other interested parties. Data as to the varieties will there be reviewed from all angles with a view to coming to some definite understanding as to varieties which should be encouraged.

Asked about the agitation over grain grading and attendant questions, he said the findings of the department's workers might have a very definite effect on the issue. "I think our information should help a great deal in coming to a decision as to what should be done. We are expecting some fairly important conclusions."

Prince Kuni was popularly regarded as one of the most democratic members of the imperial family.

TWO AIRMEN DARE HAZARDS UNKNOWN LAND

Capts. Broatch and McMillan Blaze New Trails in Sub-Arctic

Canadian Press

WINNIPEG, Jan. 28.—After an epoch-making flight into the Barren Lands, where air trails were blazed across the bleak wastes of the sub-Arctic in an aerial search for metals two cabin aeroplanes of the Dominion Explorers, Ltd., were brought to Winnipeg from The Pas by Captain B. M. Broatch and Captain S. McMillan, Saturday.

While in the north the planes were in charge of Captain Charles Sutton, former Royal Air Force aviator, and mail-pilot on the Cairo-Bagdad route and Captain Broatch, pioneer of the air trails of the frontiers of Canada. They made their base at Mistake Bay about 130 miles south of Chesterfield Inlet.

The planes were taken into the north country by Captains Sutton and Broatch early in the summer, flying the machines in a long hop from New York to Hudson Bay. Two Moth planes also were used by the exploration party in the Barren Lands.

During the season the cabin machines covered more than 8,000 miles between them without mishap. Many of the flights over the Barrens were beset with dangers, but the pilots dared the hazards of an unknown land, immeasurably aiding in the quest of rich minerals.

The main party of the expedition came south some weeks ago, but will return to the Barrens in March.

WHITE HUNTERS DISCONTENTED

Fort Smith Men Think They Are Discriminated Against

Exclusive to the Edmonton Bulletin

FORT SMITH, Alta., Jan. 23.—White trappers of the district are greatly discontented over the new regulations regarding the killing of beaver. After declaring a close season for this fur-bearing animal the order was modified, and Indians or halfbreeds, heads of family, are to be allowed to kill ten each. They then surrender the pelts to the R. C. M. police, and are given an order on any store for $25 per pelt, irrespective of size.

The white trapper, resident or otherwise, is still banned from catching beaver, and they feel that this is unjust. They have to support families the same as an Indian, and they also have to pay for a license, which in case of a non-resident, is a considerable outlay, in addition to getting their necessary outfit.

Beaver has been getting more plentiful every year and a far greater number of beaver lodges are located than formerly.

Another grievance is that Indians and halfbreeds may, by the new regulation, run over any white men's trap line and disturb thereby his trap and catch.

The white man feels no grievance for the season being closed, if closed to all, but at the distinction being made. He claims that there is no necessity for Indians and halfbreeds being privileged, as rats are plentiful.

If the season is closed to all, Indian and halfbreed will then have only to do as white men have to do, and that is to work harder catching and skinning rats.

Poultry Association Plans Annual Dinner

Members of the Edmonton Poultry Show are holding a little get-together dinner on Wednesday evening, at 6.30 in the Royal George Hotel. This is an annual event to which all look forward with a great deal of pleasure. A fine program of entertainment has been arranged by the management of the show, and there will also be a great deal of educational value in the speeches which will be given. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend. Tickets may be obtained from the members of the Edmonton Poultry and Pet Stock association.

Demonstration Of Poultry Killing

The local officers of the federal livestock branch are supervising a killing demonstration at the Poultry Show, in the Market building, next Tuesday and Thursday evenings, commencing at 8 p.m. This is a yearly feature of the show with which many are familiar, and which attracts a good deal of interest and attention. Experts at this work will be on hand to demonstrate how quickly and efficiently this work may be done. This will be an educational feature which many will find very profitable.

Children and Grown-Ups Will Enjoy Show

There are features at the Poultry Show, opening Tuesday, which will be of interest for everyone, from the children to the grown-ups. A very fine display of exhibits will be shown of all the popular breeds of poultry, and there is also a fine entry of ducks, geese, turkeys, rabbits, pigeons, bantams, and ornamental birds. For those who are not interested in poultry from the breeders' standpoint there are many things in this attractive display which will make it worth their while to view.

Turkey Exhibit Will Show Big Industry

The Alberta Bronze Turkey Breeders' Association is a live organization, judging by the number of members of that organization who are exhibiting their turkeys at the Edmonton Poultry Show, Jan. 28 to Feb. 1. This is a growing industry in Alberta at the present time, and the exhibits at the show will be of high class quality.

To Sell Dressed Birds By Auction

An auction sale of dressed poultry and eggs will be held at the Edmonton Poultry Show, in the Market Building, on Thursday evening, commencing at 5 p.m. The dressed poultry will include turkeys, geese, ducks, etc., which have been exhibited and judged at the show, and a very fine sale is expected, according to the number of entries received. Eggs of all the standard grades will also be sold by auction.

Market Building To Be Busiest Place

The Edmonton Market Building will be an extremely busy place, from Monday to Friday inclusive, when the Poultry Show is on. The show officials consider themselves very fortunate in securing this well-lighted and heated building for their show, and which is also very centrally located. The show will open at 2 p.m. on Monday, and will be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. the following days, closing Friday, Feb. 1, at 6 p.m.

Arena Rink Will Be Heated for Junior Hockey Exhibition Game Tonight

JUNIOR ESKIMOS ALL SET TO TAKE ON CALGARY CANADIANS

Brilliant Exhibition of Hockey Looked for When Crack Teams Clash—Game Starts at 8:30 Sharp—Special Street Car Service

Eddie Poulin's Calgary Junior Canadians are in town to tangle with the keenly contested as both teams appear to be about evenly matched from the Junior Eskimos in an exhibition tilt at the Arena Rink tonight, and are confident of coming out on the long end of the score. This game promises to be goal out.

Arrangements have been made with the Arena management to have the rink heated for the game tonight. Four huge furnaces in the rink were started full blast this morning, and will be kept going during the day and while the game is in progress, so that hockey fans are assured of being comfortable.

Special street car service from the rink has been arranged for, and cars to all parts of the city will be handy to take the hockey patrons home.

Added Attraction

As an added attraction the management of the Junior Eskimos has arranged for Clyde Watt to give an exhibition of barrel jumping between each period. This young local skater will jump over seven apple barrels placed in a row on the ice.

Although the cold weather is expected to hurt the attendance, there is certain to be a good crowd of local hockey enthusiasts on hand when the teams take the ice. The puck will be faced off at 8:30 o'clock sharp.

The southerners have been setting a dizzy pace in their own league and have not lost a game this season. Manager Poulin will trot out his strongest line-up tonight, but will be without the services of his star left-winger, Pete Semkoeicz, who has quit the amateur game and signed a contract to play with the Portland Buckaroos in the Pacific Coast league.

The Calgarians realize that they will be in for a hard struggle and they are not under-estimating the ability of the local boys.

Esks in Form

The Esks will be at full strength and manager Bob Muir reported today that all of his pets were in good shape McNab will be between the posts, with Mann and McNeill doing guard duty out in front. Gillis, Purcell and Doherty will start at their regular positions on the forward division.

The teams will line-up as follows:

Cameron		McNab
	Defence
C. Scott		Mann
Hutton		McNeill

Culley		Gillis

Lehman's protested that a goal scored by Palangio just as the first period ended should have been counted.

Ross Flats Girls Take Their Third Straight Contest

The Ross Flats girls' hockey team the Junior Capitols, won their third straight game on Friday, when they defeated the Bennett "Hustlers" by a score of 5-1. AMERICANS DOWN COUGARS

DETROIT, Jan. 28.—Outskated and outplayed in the two opening periods the Detroit Cougars lost a National Hockey league game to the league-leading New York Americans here last night, 2 to 1.

The Americans played a stalling game, sending men up the ice just often enough to permit Reise and Sheppard to score. Reise's goal came early in the first period and his shot caught Dolson unprepared. The second American goal was somewhat of a fluke. During a melee in front of the Cougar goal, Sheppard let fly and Dolson stepped aside and let the puck into the strings. He claimed the whistle had blown but Referee Marsh believed the Cougar net guard had mistaken the scream of a woman fan for the whistle.

Line-up

Americans— Worters, Reise, Conacher, Burch, Connor, Broadbent, McVeigh, Simpson, Himes, Bouchard Sheppard.

Detroit— Dolson, Noble, Brydge, Herberts, Connors, Cooper, Lewis, Aurie, Hay, Brophy, Traub.

CANADIENS TRIM SENATORS

OTTAWA, Jan. 28.— Montreal's flashy Canadiens crept to within one point of the idle New York Americans leaders of the Canadian division of the National Hockey League by defeating the lowly Ottawa Senators before 6,000 fans here Saturday night by two goals to one. While Canadiens finished just one goal better than Ottawa, they deserved their margin on the play as they excelled the home squad in the first and third periods and displayed more systematic hockey throughout.

Burke scored the winning tally on a brilliant solo dash in the final frame.

Line-ups

Canadiens— Hainsworth, S. Mantha, Burke, Lepine, Gagne, Joliat, Morenz, Leduc, G. Mantha, Patterson, Mondou Carson.

Bill Cook made the Rangers' score.

TENNIS TITLE GOES TO U.S.

Willard Crocker Defeated By Gilbert Hall at Indoor Tourney

MONTREAL, Jan. 28.—The Canadian indoor tennis crown has again crossed the border into the United States and will repose for the year 1929 on the head of Gilbert Hall, the New York champion. Hall concluded a week of brilliant tennis by defeating Willard F. Crocker, of Montreal, Canadian Davis cup player, in the final at the Montreal indoor tennis club Saturday by a score of 2-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-3.

The visiting United States players failed in their attacks on the doubles title, however, when Willard Crocker and Marcel Rainville withstood the determined onslaught of William Aydelotte and Merritt Cutler of New York. The local team came from behind to win the final at 7-5, 3-6, 0-6, 8-6, 6-4, in one of the most exciting matches ever seen here.

It was the doubles match that provided the thrills and the best tennis of the day. The doubles was rather a magnificent comeback of the Canadians and led by the diminutive Marcel Rainville, was a fitting conclusion to the ceremony.

Rainville has been playing fine tennis all week, but he outshone himself in the final. With Crocker obviously fatigued, his partner took upon himself the burden of the attack, and it was his tactics and brilliant play that carried the day.

TOM SEATON USED TO GET A HITTER'S GOAT BY STARING AT HIM
EDDIE PLANK PAWED AROUND IN THE PITCHER'S BOX TO GET THE BATTER NERVOUS

By AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher New York Giants)

The gentle art of getting an opponent's goat and throwing him off his game is practically in every line of sport. Stalling and procrastination have always been very successful methods of making an opponent nervous.

Ralph Greenleaf proved this recently when his stalling tactics so exasperated Frank Taberski, that he walked out and left the recent pocket billiards championship tournament flat.

Baseball pitchers have also found that stalling and deliberate motions in the box worry the average batter, who is keyed up to the breaking point.

Eddie Plank, the former Philadelphia Athletic pitching ace, with his nerve-racking pauses while he apparently was studying the catcher's signs, was always a thorn in the side of the nervous hitter, and owed much of his success to his slowness in pitching.

Slow-playing golfers like Frank Dolp often throw their opponents completely off their game, through sheer exasperation and nervousness.

Rangers Keep Clean Record by Defeating Airdrieonians Easily

GLASGOW, Scotland, Jan. 28.—Glasgow Rangers maintained their winning stride in Scottish first division soccer matches Saturday, easily shaking off the challenge of Airdrieonians by two goals to nil. Archibald and Cunningham were the Rangers' scorers.

Hearts, defeated by Airdrie in a cup fixture last week, were themselves again and beat Celtic by two goals to one. Carruthers hit the target twice for the Edinburgh club, while Scarrie scored for Celtic. The game was featureless with Hearts never in great danger.

The goals of White and Lindsay enabled Cowdenbeath to win from Partick Thistle, while Townrow's tally put Dundee in the winning column against Hibernians. Morrison came through with his usual brace of tallies for Falkirk, who, playing at home won from Aberdeen.

After being two goals down St. Mirren pulled up on even terms and got a draw with St. Johnstone.

ELKS SPRING BIG UPSET BY TROUNCING MAPLE LEAFS 2-1

Antlered Herd Forces Way Back Into Thick of Battle for Place in Play-off Series—Cold Weather Keeps Fans at Home

	P	W	L	D	F	A	Pts
Superiors	9	7	2	0	36	20	14
Maple Leafs	9	5	4	0	30	28	10
Elks	8	4	4	0	21	25	8
Varsity	6	0	6	0	16	40	0

George Cristall's fighting herd of Elks are back into the thick of the Senior Amateur Hockey League race as a result of a surprise victory over the Maple Leafs in a scheduled fixture played at Varsity Rink on Saturday night, the final score reading 2 to 1.

Conceded only an outside chance of setting back the barber-pole outfit by most local hockey followers, the "Hello Bills" came through with a win to completely upset all calculations and bunch the teams closer than ever in their drive for a play-off berth.

Small Crowd Out

Scarcely a handful of fans ventured from their firesides to see the clubs in action, for, with the mercury hovering around forty-five below, it was anything but a pleasant night to watch a hockey game and only the most enthusiastic were on hand.

The extreme cold weather prevented any high-class display of the winter pastime and the exceptionally hard surface prevented the athletes' skates from gripping as well as they should. Despite this, the contest was interesting throughout, though this was mainly due to the close score with either team having a chance to win right up to the final gong. The Leafs enjoyed a slight edge on the play but they failed to grasp their opportunities while the Elks, on the other hand, made the most of what came their way. None of the three goals that were scored were of the clean-cut variety but came rather unexpectedly.

First Period Scoreless

There was no scoring in the opening period although "Lefty" Grove sunk the puck in the nets behind Howey but was offside when he got possession. MacMillan was also presented with a fine chance to score when he received a pass right in front of the goal but was off-balance and could not get a shot. The Elks also missed fire on a couple of dangerous-looking rushes.

The second period was almost into the history stage when the Elks got their first marker. With only about ten seconds left to play, Dame rushed down the ice, slipped a pass to Paul Maher who carried the disc in close to the goal and attempted another pass to Dame. Instead of reaching his side-kick, the rubber was intercepted by Castagner, and somehow the puck glanced into the net off the skate of one of the defending team.

When Stan Moher slapped in a rebound off the back boards of the rink after seven minutes of play in the third frame it appeared that the Leafs were going to be very much in the running for the decision but their hopes were again dashed thirty-five seconds later when Wilf Kinney lifted a long shot from the blue line that got by Castagner.

None of the performers played outstanding hockey but, considering the weather, they were as good as could be expected.

JOTS FROM HISTORY

PONCE DE LEON, (1460-1521), the Spanish discoverer of Florida, is one of the best remembered explorers of early America. Having been a page in the king's court, and seeing service against the Moors, Ponce de Leon grew restive in Europe. He came to the West Indies and governed a part of Porto Rico. In 1512 he set out toward the continent to find the Fountain of Youth, the fame of which had spread over the Spanish possessions. Twice he returned to the mainland on the search, but failed. Finally he died from the wound of a poison arrow received in Florida.

HEAVY SALES AT WINNIPEG

Wheat Prices go Down Under Pressure—Flood of Offerings

Canadian Press

WINNIPEG, Jan. 28.—Heavy selling shoved today's wheat prices to lower levels, closing prices showing net losses of 1⅜ to 1⅝ for the day.

The market at times attempted an advance but a flood of offerings stopped the forward movements. Trading was light.

Cash wheat trading was dull. Export sales were very light and millers took very little interest in today's market. Prices were practically unchanged.

Firmness prevailed on the coarse grain section. Barley slumped about ¾ early in the trading but regained the loss at the close.

CHICAGO MARKET

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—Influenced by weakness of Liverpool quotations and by foreign selling here, Chicago wheat averaged lower early today but also showed to rally. Forests of a new cold wave in domestic winter wheat territory, attracted attention. Opening ¼ cent off to ¼ cent up, Chicago wheat underwent a general setback and then turned up grade.

Corn started unchanged to ⅛ cent to ½ cent higher and subsequently held near to the initial figures.

Winnipeg Grain Letter

By Jas. Richardson & Sons

WINNIPEG, Jan. 28—The recent advance in wheat prices has attracted an increased movement from the country, particularly through American markets, and this was largely responsible for today's decline in prices. Export business was again present in small proportions, and with the buying satisfied for the time being, offerings were more liberal than could be readily absorbed, and closing prices were 1¼c lower.

Statistics were about as expected. World shipments continued to run well over 20 million bushels, while the disappearance continues correspondingly heavy.

The percentage of shipments, however, from the southern hemisphere continues to increase. Unfavorable weather continues to prevail in Nebraska and parts of Kansas, and further damage reports were received today. The forecast is for colder weather tonight and Tuesday. The reaction in price from the high point has been a natural one, and whether or not it will continue will depend on the character of news concerning growing wheat and the attitude of the foreign buying. The technical position is weak.—Brown, Jr.

Suspect Arrested In Miami As Schnabel

Canadian Press

TORONTO, Jan. 28.—Inspector of detectives Mufray received a telegram from Miami, Fla., Sunday night, stating that a man closely answering the description of George Schnabel, alleged wife-murderer wanted by the Montreal police, had been arrested in a small town north of Miami, on a charge of passing bogus cheques. This man gave the name of W. W. Gourley.

Inspector Murray got on the long distance telephone to Montreal and notified captain of detectives O'Donnell of the contents of the wire. He asked that a detailed description of Schnabel, a photograph and finger prints be dispatched to the southern town as soon as possible.

ENGINEER AND FIREMAN KILLED

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 28.—B. Woodland, engineer, and C. H. Giffens, fireman, were killed when their locomotive, one of two which were proceeding eastward on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, went over a bridge into a ravine at Cutbank, about 50 miles east of Revelstoke. The accident occurred shortly before nine o'clock this morning. The forward end remained on the track. Both men are from Revelstoke.

W. H. Hudson, the naturalist, was partial to riding rather than walking for ideas, and especially riding in a high wind.

Weekly Review

By Jas. Richardson & Sons

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 28—The action of the Montreal Stock Exchange during the past week demonstrated in a striking manner that the rank and file of listed issues, given an opportunity to reflect their real value, are capable of giving a good account of themselves. This opportunity was provided towards the end of the week, when the intensive interests that have been centered on International Nickel subsided to some extent, and traders with big profits on their Nickel holdings turned their attention to other stocks that offered attractive possibilities for enhancement in values. As a result trading broadened out to an extent not witnessed for weeks past, and many issues were taken and pushed upwards in an impressive manner.

While practically the whole list was affected by the bullish enthusiasm that developed, the outstanding features were provided by stocks of equipment and construction companies. The car stocks were especially spectacular, with small capitalization of the company has facilitated in large measures the operations of a large pool, which is reputed to be aiming at placing the stock on a level warranted by a huge volume of business on hand in anticipation of a forthcoming capital reorganization. Recommendations credited to authoritative sources are reported to have stated the common stock would not be too high at 200, and the participating feature of the preferred places it in an advantageous position in any revamping that may take place in the capital structure of the company. In the uprush of prices, the common showed a maximum advance of 23 points at its peak and the preferred 38 points.

National Steel Car with the terms of the new stock issues already known, was less prominent, but was also notably strong, gaining nearly eight points. Dominion Bridge came to life suddenly on the reports that the company had obtained an important addition to the large amount of business already booked in the form of a large contract for steel work for International Nickel company. Steady accumulation for some time past has placed the stock in a strong technical position, and the heavy demand that developed carried the price to a new high record level. Hamilton Bridge also came in for insistent demand, and reflected the improved backing the stock is reported to have received recently, by rising twelve points to a new peak and holding close to its high. International Nickel maintained its active leadership and advanced to the highest point yet reached. Predictions by local interests that the stock would sell at the equivalent of 8 per cent. for the old stock appeared to be well on their way to fulfilment, when the new issue sold at a price equal to 432 on the old. Confidence in the future of the big Canadian undertaking has become so large that even at what might be considered an inflated level, the stock absorbed an immense amount of profit taking without seriously impairing the wide gains scored recently. A feature of the week was the appearance of the December earnings of Brazilian Traction and total gross and net for the past year. These showed a record increase in net for December of approximately $3,000,000 for the twelve months to the highest level yet reported by the company. The stock continued to be affected by the switching into another issue, particularly Nickel, and receded somewhat from its recent high, but was at all times wellsupported and reflected the strong position it occupies among local leaders.

Newsprint stocks fluctuated in unison with the hopes and fears regarding the outcome of negotiations of price adjustment negotiations now in progress as a whole. However, the stocks in this group showed net losses for the week, after at one time having scored a general rally. The biggest gain of the week was scored by Consolidated Smelters. The large amount of stockamounts of stock that are locked up in investment accounts renders it susceptible to a quick rise when any demand develops, and when this occurred an almost perpendicular advance of over 50 points resulted. The power group participated in the general movement to higher levels, with Quebec and Shawinigan making the best showings of the group.

STOCKS LOSE EARLY GAINS

Selling Movement at New York Stops Soaring Prices

Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—A soaring movement promptly went into a nose dive as soon as the buying movement spent itself in the late forenoon today. Early gains of one to ten points in a wide assortment of motors, rails and specialties were fairly generally replaced with losses of one to eight points.

Call money renewed at six per cent.

New York Central jumped more than five points but lost half its gain. Radio jumped ahead ten points and promptly fell back. International Telephone moved up more than seven points and also reacted.

American Tobacco "" jumped seven points and Liggett Myers "" 3 points. International Harvester gained five and Case Threshing dropped eight.

United States Steel lost more than 2 points. Johns Manville, Nickel, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, National Cash Register and Nash Motors were among issues losing 2 to 4 points.

The closing was irregular. Commercial Solvents, which reached 245½, a new high, more than ten points above Saturday's close. Westinghouse Electric jumped 7 and Colorado Fuel and Pacific Telephone and Telegraph five points. Midland Steel Products preferred fell seven.

Sales approximated 4,800,000 shares.

Toronto Mines

(Canadian Press)

TORONTO, Jan. 27 — A sensational decline in Jackson-Manion from the closing price on Friday of 29 cents to opening sales of 5 cents due to the publication of the Rogers and Hopkins reports on the company's affairs, overshadowed all other developments on the Standard Mining exchange Saturday.

Only a few lots changed hands with final transactions at 13 cents, a net loss of 16 cents.

The weakness of Jackson-Manion had an unsettling effect on the balance of the list. International Nickel finished at $68.55, a net loss of $1.70. Only ten shares of Mond came out, the quotation being $66.25, down $1.75. Falconbridge was active and 25 cents higher at $7.95. Noranda bottomed at $62.75, and finished at $63.25, a gain of 50 cents.

Pend Oreille rallied to $15 an advance of 50 cents, and the rest of the Pacific Coast stocks were firm. Grandview was 6 cents stronger at 76 cents, Kootenay Florence ¼ cent at 23 cents and Big Missouri unchanged at $1.60.

Hudson Bay Mining was 25 cents higher at $21 in comparatively light trading. Sherritt Gordon and Mandy Mines held steady at $7 and $1.25 respectively. Central Manitoba fell back three cents to 67 cents and San Antonio back 2 cents to 18 cents.

BIG ISSUE OF STOCK IN NEW DYE WORKS CO.

Flotation Follows Sale of Trudeau's Business to Victorians

W. Ross Alger Corporation, Limited with Branson, Brown and company, limited, Victoria and Victor Odium and company limited, Vancouver are today offering a new issue of $150,000, 7 per cent preferred stock with bonus of two and a half shares common stock with each preferred share of The Pantorium Dye Works of Canada, Limited.

A short time ago Mr. Trudeau of Trudeau's Cleaning and Dye Works sold his plant and real estate and all assets connected with same to the above company who have amalgamated it with their plant at Victoria and are to operate the two under the one management. The total combined assets as certified by one Canadian Appraisal company, limited; Ismay, Boiston, Holden and company; and Patriquin & Johnstone are $235,563.74.

1927	188,265.66
1928	224,447.77

The combined net earnings for the same period are as follows:

1926	$31,405.83
1927	47,005.66
1928	60,211.77

With the 1928 earnings only including ten months revenue for the Edmonton plant and eleven month's revenue for the Victoria plant, and after making full allowance for all depreciation and so forth.

It is not anticipated making any change in the operation of the plant here, and the present staff will all be retained, assuring the continuance of the high efficiency of this company which as in the past.

The company is issuing $150,000 of 7 per cent non-cumulative preferred stock, the proceeds of which are to apply towards the purchase of the Edmonton company.

On account of the high earnings it would appear as if there are possibilities for an attractive return on the common stock, which is being given as a bonus with the preferred shares, and which gives the investor an opportunity of obtaining a local security with a high interest yield.

O.C. FOOTBALL CHAMPS LOSE

Manchester City Humbles Everton by Score Of 5 to 1

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Everton, leading champions, were humbled in one of the two games played by English soccer league first division clubs Saturday. They were playing Manchester City at Manchester and were on the losing end of a five to one decision.

Cardiff and Sheffield United played to a scoreless draw. The match was the poorest kind of exhibition.

The other first division clubs were engaged in cup ties.

In the second division games Tottenham Hotspurs put a crimp in Notts County's hopes of staging a comeback, beating them at White Hart Lane by three goals to nil before 25,000 people.

Bristol City and Blackpool both gave a good account of themselves, Bristol, who were playing at home, being just good enough to win.

Scores Penalty Kick

Southampton made the long trip to Preston North End to win by the only goal scored. Gribb delivered it in the second half on a penalty kick.

Northampton ran rings around Exeter City in a third division, southern section match. Fulham cast a damper on the hopes of Queen's Park Rangers of getting to the top of the league standing by completely outplaying them five goals to nil.

Stockport County did well to go to Lincoln City and win. Wrexham kept in the running for league honors by thrashing Ashington.

Two Middle Distance Contests Captured by Canadian Olympic Star

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—An hour or so after he had captured the 800-metre invitation at the Masonic games in Manhattan, Phil Edwards, Canadian Olympic middle distance runner from New York university, won the 600-yard special in the Norwegian society's games in Brooklyn. A taxicab took Edwards from the Engineers armory where the Masonic games were held to the National armory in Brooklyn where the Norwegian meet was held.

Edwards was given a severe battle of it in the 600 yard event by Oliver Proudlock of the Newark A. C. Proudlock was beaten by only three yards. Edwards's time was 1:14 1-5.

The negro star's victory gave him his second leg on the Olaf Hartzwig trophy.

In the 800-metre event, Edwards won in comparatively easy fashion, beating his team-mate, Fred Veit, by ten yards. Harold Cutbill, erstwhile "Flying Parson," was third. Edwards' time was 1:56 2-5.

RACQUETS CHAMPION

MONTREAL, Jan. 28.—A. S. Cassils of Montreal, won the Canadian singles racquets championship Saturday by defeating F. H. Dobel, another local entry, 15-8, 15-6, 15-8. The doubles title went to F. C. and F. H. Dobel, of Montreal, who beat E. S. Cassils and G. H. Turpin of Montreal, 15-4, 14-18, 17-14, 15-5, 12-15.

ARMY STOPS CANUCKS

WEST POINT, N.Y., Jan. 28.—Army triumphed over the University of Toronto here Saturday in boxing and wrestling. The boxing was closely contested, the cadets winning from their Canadian rivals by four bouts to three, but in the wrestling Toronto was unable to win a single bout of the seven contested.

Basketball Notes

The usual Tuesday evening games of the Girls City Basketball League will be played at the Y.W.C.A. gymnasium tomorrow when the Commercial Gradettes will meet the Bulletin girls at eight o'clock followed by the contest between the Independents and the Normal School quintette.

This is probably the last appearance of the Independents in the league as most of the active members of this team have taken membership with Bill Pullishy's Eskimos and will begin their schedule of games in the provincial series on the following Tuesday evening.

Tomorrow will also see the conclusion of the first half of the winter schedule and a meeting of the executive will shortly be called by chairman Frank Drayton to arrange for further games and also to elect a new secretary of the league, due to the resignation of A. R. Lawrence, who has carried on the duties for some three years past. Information should also be available as to the city league trophy and conditions of competition.

It is expected that an arrangement will be entered into so that on each Tuesday evening during February a game of the city league will be played on the same program that the provincial contestants appear on the Y.W.C.A. floor.

Nurmi and Wide Will Be Hard Combination To Beat This Season

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Paavo Nurmi and Edvin Wide, it appears, are going to be just a trifle more than any other American runner can handle this indoor track season.

Wide started his United States invasion at the Masonic games here Saturday night by distancing a mediocre field in a special 1500-metre run. Wide turned in exceptionally fast time for the distance—4:03 1-5.

Meanwhile Nurmi raced a field of nine into the ground at the Prout memorial games in Boston, taking a special two-mile invitation run in 9 minutes, 12 seconds. He beat his nearest rival and compatriot, Ove Anderson, to the tape by three quarters of a lap.

ARREST DISORDERLY FANS

BOSTON, Jan. 28.—Angry hockey fans who dispute the referee's decisions by hurling missiles onto the ice from the balconies at the Boston Garden will be arrested for disorderly conduct, Sheldon H. Fairbanks, general manager of the sport resort, announced yesterday.

PAN-AMERICAN GOLF

EDGEWATER PARK, Miss., Jan 28—Gus Novotny, of La Grange, Ill., western amateur runner-up, won the Pan-American Amateur Golf Championship tournament from Don Armstrong, Aurora, Ill., defending champion, two up, here Saturday.

LOWERS SKATING RECORD

TORONTO, Jan. 28.—Miss Leila Brooks of Toronto, woman's skating champion, lowered the world record for the 880-yard to 1:27 1-5 seconds at the Parkdale Ladies club meet here Saturday.

PRO RACQUETS MATCH

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 28.—Charles Williams, Chicago, Saturday defeated Jock Soutar, world's professional racquets champion, four games to two, in the first half of the challenge match for the title. The second half of the challenge match will be played in Chicago next Saturday.
